Pensions Wanted By P.E.N.

A PROPOSAL that a State Fund for writers, artists and actors be set up, to be administered by the President and the Council of State, was made at the P.E.N. Club meeting in Jury's Hotel, on Saturday night, and it was announced by Miss Kathleen O'Brennan, Hon. Secretary, that she had had private assurance that the Taoiseach would be ready to receive a deputation on the subject.

The committee of P.E.N. will meet to consider the matter at the end of this week, and a memorandum will be prepared and a small delegation selected. This delegation will then await the Taoiseach's decision as to what day he will receive them.

The chief speaker on the subject on Saturday was Mr. Lennox Robinson, who said that in ancient Ireland the great houses of the land made provision for the poets and story tellers. But in the Ireland of to-day they had the position that a great Irishman like the late W. B. Yeats was assisted in his old age by friends in America and by a British Government pension. James Stephens, another great Irish writer, also had a pension from the British Civil List. Generally, artists did not make a great deal of provision for the future, and one of the most pathetic things in the world was the plight of the old actor and musician who had spent their lives giving pleasure to others.

A DISGRACE

Miss Kathleen O'Brennan said she believed a scheme could be put through. She suggested that if a State Fund were created it should be controlled by the State Council, as it would be undesirable to have such a fund at the disposal of any party Government, either now or in the future.

Mr. Rutherford Mayne said that every country in Europe except Ireland had something in the nature of a civil list, and it was a disgrace that Ireland did not have one.

Mr. P. Beaslai said that it would have been a good idea for the Government to have subsidised a man like Padraig O'Conaire, who threw up an English Civil Service job to come home and write in poverty.

Mr. D. J. Giltinan said that, speaking as a member of WAAMA, the project would have that Association's support.

Professor Agnes O'Farrelly, Mrs. Sheehy Skeffington, Mr. Lynn Doyle and District Justice Reddin also spoke in favour of the proposal.

ALLIES CAPTURE TUNISIAN PEAKS

8th Army Re-grouped

ACCORDING to Associated Press, the Allies captured during the week-end a number of heights in the Medjez-Tebourba sector of Tunisia.

Vigorous patrolling is the main feature of action along the whole 130-mile front. Axis radio reports state that General Montgomery has finished re-grouping his forces.

25 MILES FROM TUNIS

The Associated Press War Correspondent, in a message last night from Chaouach village, stated:—

Attacking in darkness and early dawn up steep green slopes, Allied infantry, supported by massed artillery, re-captured all the heights temporarily lost in this area to Axis counter-attacks.

The new success gave the Allies a string of peaks cutting across the mountain range parallel to the Medjez el Bab-Tebourba road. A night and day's fighting re-established the British troops on top of the hills called Bou Diss and Tanngoucha, each of which was heavily counter-attacked the day before.

With the Allies within 25 miles—on a direct line—from Tunis in this sector the Axis forces hotly contested each foot of the territory.

The German Command has heavily fortified the perimeter on which the line has momentarily become fixed, and there was every indication that the battle from now on would be a matter of "eating away" these points of resistance.

The commanding hills must be occupied before the valleys can be opened for tank operations, and behind each hill there is another centre of resistance on the next height.

The French are still pushing northwards in the central sector of the front, where they are fighting in the mountains above the passes leading down to Pont du Fahs and the coastal plain.

On their right flank the Eighth Army, getting into position for the next blow, is operating along the thirty miles of territory between the mountain range and Enfidaville.

In Southern Tunisia, Vichy Radio stated yesterday, General Montgomery had finished regrouping his forces, and it was reported that Eighth Army infantry had now joined up with motorised and advanced elements. The Allies were holding their positions, but had made no further advance, the Radio asserted.

Vichy Radio also said that General Montgomery flew to Algiers for discussions with General Giraud and Lieutenant-General Patton.

Yesterday's Allied communiqué stated:—

"Active patrolling continues along the whole of the 18th Army Group fronts. Otherwise there is nothing to report. On Friday night motor torpedo boats operating off the Gulf of Tunis sighted a convoy of merchantmen, escorted by destroyers. In the attack which followed one of the enemy merchantmen was sunk. Shortly afterwards aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm attacked this same convoy with torpedoes. An observer in one aircraft, whose pilot had to take violent avoiding action to avoid collision with an enemy ship, reports his torpedo run perfectly, and a double plume of water shot up from the side of a vessel of the tanker type.

"Wellington bombers attacked the docks at Bizerta. Many bombs fell in the target area, and a large fire was started. Medium and light bombers continued their attacks on airfields in Tunisia.

"Flying Fortresses, with fighter escort, made heavy attacks on the docks at Ferryville and Palermo. During this attack strong formations of enemy aircraft attacked the bombers and their escort. Seventeen enemy aircraft were destroyed.

"Throughout the day medium and light bombers carried out attacks on enemy lines of communication and positions in the battle area. Fighters maintained sweeps and patrols, during the course of which twelve enemy aircraft were destroyed. From all these operations eight of our aircraft are missing.

"Last night a few enemy aircraft dropped bombs in the Algiers area. There were a number of casualties and some damage to civilian property was done. One enemy bomber was destroyed."

U.S. LOSSES

GENERAL EISENHOWER stated at Algiers that in operations from Gafsa American casualties were 5,372 killed, wounded and missing.

The Americans captured 4,680 prisoners, 683 vehicles and 150 guns. He said that the millionth-ton mark of Axis shipping sunk in the Mediterranean was reached a fortnight ago.

AXIS COMMUNIQUES

The German communiqué stated: "From the Tunisian front only artillery and reconnaissance troop activity by both sides is reported. On this battlefront our troops, in the course of heavy battles between April 1 and 15, destroyed over 200 British and American tanks. German bombers carried out a heavy night attack on the harbour of Algiers."

The Italian communiqué stated that along the Tunisian front there was intense and prolonged artillery duels. Allied thrusts in the southern sector were repulsed. The communiqué added:—"During the night of April 15-16 two of our torpedo-boats, escorting a convoy, attacked two British destroyers. One of these made off with fire streaming from it and then exploded and sank."

AIR COMPARISONS

Major-General Carl Spaatz, Commander-in-Chief, North-West African Air Forces, stated yesterday that since the start of the Mareth battle 519 Axis aircraft had been shot down, and nearly twice that number destroyed or damaged on the ground. Allied losses in the air, he said, were 175 aircraft; less than ten were destroyed on the ground. Since March 15, eighteen Axis merchant ships had been destroyed and many more damaged.

"The North-West African Air Force has secured vital supremacy in the air since the battle of Mareth," General Spaatz said. "We roam freely day and night over Tunisia, Sicily and Sardinia."

A British Admiralty statement last night said that the Royal Navy is taking a heavy and increasing toll of Axis supplies. From the time last month when the Eighth Army was preparing its offensive against the Mareth Line, British submarines have destroyed 21 Axis ships in the Mediterranean. They damaged eight other supply ships and three tankers. At least four of these vessels are believed to have sunk later. These totals do not include small craft.—(Reuter, Associated Press and Press Association.)

Limerick's £900,000 Post-war Schemes

Schemes estimated to cost approximately £900,000 were submitted by Mr. P. J. Meagher, B.E., County Manager, at a meeting of the Limerick County Council on Saturday. These schemes were being prepared, he said, to be carried out when conditions became normal, and they should be capable of abolishing unemployment in County Limerick. A water and sewerage project, it was stated, would cost £120,000, housing in villages £200,000, Regional Hospital £400,000, and new County Courthouse £150,000.

Bank Holiday Bread Supplies

To bake, or not to bake, on nights preceding Bank Holidays . . . This is the question agitating the minds of members of the Bakers', Confectioners' and Allied Workers' Amalgamated Union. Since night-work was abolished in the bakery trade it has been the practice of bakers to do night-work on the eve of Bank Holidays. Now they are objecting to bake on such occasions. A solution of the difficulty may be found in the baking during the day of the additional supplies of bread required. The Department of Industry and Commerce and the Master Bakers' Association are considering the question.

Battles In Kuban Mud

HEAVY fighting, with some slight territorial gains for the Red Army, has been raging in the waterlogged Kuban River valley at the entrance to the Taman Peninsula over the past 24 hours, says Reuter's Moscow Correspondent. The Russians appear to have been maintaining their pressure on this German pocket after the big two-day battle, in which the Germans tried hard, at a cost of 4,000 dead, to re-establish lost positions.

Red Star reports fierce fighting, with the Germans throwing in reserves and attacking at various points with big infantry forces and a considerable number of tanks. Fierce air battles are raging up and down the entire front. Advancing Soviet troops were frequently dive-bombed. One Soviet vanguard moving up to its battle stations was attacked three times.

Lieutenant - General Dragomin, Commander of the 19th Rumanian Division, left Taman by special 'plane with six other Rumanian and German Staff officers last week bound for Odessa by way of the Crimea.

On the Donetz front, the Germans have not abandoned their bid to capture the important Soviet bridgeheads of the river's right bank. For the time being the spring floods have made it difficult to use tanks, and General Tikhanov's men, often outnumbered, are fighting local battles fiercely and tenaciously.

Although not always figuring in the communiqué, the fighting south of Byeli, on the Smolensk front, has been almost uninterrupted.

The early spring is a trying time for the troops. Practically every movement involves crossing some stretch of icy water, often knee deep. Once off the infrequent roads horses and men must do all the hauling, even for heavy guns.

Soviet civil defence workers in all Russian cities close to the front line have been warned to be doubly alert for enemy air raids. The whole population of Moscow "must spare no effort to improve the anti-aircraft defences, and civil defence units must be maintained in absolute readiness."

RUSSIAN REPORT

The mid-day Russian communiqué said that on the Kuban German infantry regiments launched a counter-attack. "Our men held their fire and opened up with all arms at short range. A considerable number of the enemy were wiped out, and the remainder retreated in disorder.

"South of Balakleya our troops fought an engagement of local importance. The enemy left about 60 dead officers and men.

"Central Front.—Our artillery opened fire on an enemy concentration. About 200 enemy were killed and eight lorries with war material were destroyed.

"On the north-western front our artillery destroyed three enemy trench mortar batteries, including one consisting of six-barrelled mortars.

"On the Volkhov front our artillery destroyed 12 enemy dug-outs and pillboxes, silenced one artillery and five mortar batteries, and blew up an enemy supply dump."

BOMBS FIRE JAPANESE ISLAND BASE

GENERAL MacARTHUR'S heavy bombers bombed the dock and waterfront areas of the Japanese Pacific island base of Amboina, said Reuter's Special Correspondent at Allied Headquarters, South-West Pacific, yesterday. Liberators swooped at dusk. Their bombs caused numerous explosions and left many fires blazing. Only twelve Japanese fighters came up to intercept. Four of them were shot down, and another was left limping home.

The twenty-four hours covered in the latest communiqué saw some slackening in the tempo of the air war over the seas and islands above Australia. No further Japanese raids were reported, while Allied activity, apart from the Amboina raid and some straffing of Japanese-held villages and airfields, was mainly armed reconnaissance.

In the Bismarck Sea a Liberator attacked a lone 5,000-ton Japanese vessel some ninety miles south-west of Kavieng, but was unable to see the results. Japanese aerodromes at Timika and Gasmata were bombed.—(Reuter.)

The destruction of three Japanese bombers and three fighters was announced in a United States Navy communiqué last night. Two surface ships were damaged in the Solomons area.

PERILOUS STRAIN ON AUSTRALIA

Mr. Curtin, Australian Premier, broadcast yesterday a reply to criticisms that Australia's case for global strategy involved a contradiction, as a smashing blow was dealt against the Japanese every time danger loomed up. "That is true," he said, "but it is also true that these blows impose a strain on our resources which at times come perilously close to exhaustion point.

"To our Allies I say that the Australian Government accepts global strategy in so far as it conditions Australia's employment as an offensive base until Hitler is beaten, but does not accept the flow of material, notably aircraft, which does not measure up to the requirements of a holding war."—(Reuter.)

DUBLIN PUBLICANS' DILEMMA

WITH many publicans trying to meet the provisions of the new Intoxicating Liquor Act and their assistants trying to maintain the hours which they have heretofore been working, Dublin people were able to get drink yesterday at any time between 1.30 and 7 p.m. The law provides for opening from 1.30 to 3 and 5 to 7, the old hours being 2 to 5. Those with family help used the new hours, and many of the others kept to the old, so that there was always some public-house open between 1.30 and 7 p.m. Hotels kept to the new hours, and in the hotel where delegates to the annual conference of the Irish National Union of Vintners, Grocers and Allied Trades Assistants lunched the delegates were unable to get a drink, it being in the closed hours, 3 to 5.

At the conference in the Banba Hall, the General President (Mr. W. Breen) said that if it was sabotage to oppose a bill which reduced their conditions of living to slavery, then a great number of the licensed trade must also be saboteurs, because a large number of licensed traders opposed this bill, side by side with the union. The new hours, Mr. Breen contended, would not solve the bona-fide evil, but would create a much greater evil than ever existed before. The new hours would also take a heavy toll on the health of the men. He called for the withdrawal, or the amending of the measure, and added that the assistants were standing by them.

A delegation from the Licensed Grocers' and Vintners' Protection Association was told by officials of the Department of Industry and Commerce yesterday that the Department had no intention at present of ordering the closing of publichouses at 10 p.m. on week days. Mr. R. C. Ferguson, Secretary of the Department, said that 10 o'clock closing was not contemplated at present, and that the Minister did not see his way to remove licensed trade employés from the operation of Wages Order 166.

Fine Gael And Trade Pacts Plan

MR. COSGRAVE'S statement that he would use the best brains in the country irrespective of party must be regarded as invaluable, said Mr. William Dwyer, Fine Gael candidate for Cork, at a meeting in Portarlington yesterday. Fine Gael intended to send men of Ministerial rank to negotiate with Britain and the United States, from both the point of view of obtaining supplies now and ear-marking supplies and making trade agreements for the post-war period.

CIVIL SERVANTS

Referring to the custom of blaming civil servants for the Orders and restrictions which had arisen through the incompetence of the present Government, Mr. Dwyer said that he held no brief for the civil servants, but he thought they were shouldering the blame of their Ministers. It was the duty of the Ministers in power to lay down policy and of civil servants to administer it.

In 1914, and again in 1939, the British found that the system lacked elasticity. Vast numbers of the higher executives in commerce and industry placed their services at the disposal of the Government, and to-day there were at the head of every department of the Ministry of Supply men of experience acting as liaison officers between the Ministry and industry. These men understood the difficulties of industrialists, and from their position they could ignore red tape and get things done.

Fianna Fail, with that curious inferiority complex and lack of trust in their own nationals, never thought of following the accepted democratic principle. Instead they piled work to a heart-breaking extent on the higher members of the Department of Supplies, and when they did augment their staff did it from the top and not from the bottom.

INCOMPETENT CONTROL

Dr. T. F. O'Higgins, T.D., at a Fine Gael meeting held in Birr yesterday, made a bitter attack on the Government's failure to foresee or make timely provision for any of our present supply difficulties. Immediate rationing of all the people had, he said, been urged by the Opposition at the war's outbreak, but nothing was done for two years, and then only the fringe of the problem was dealt with. Even then civil servants without any advice from, or consultation with, the various trades, made emergency regulations, so that the whole picture of incompetent Government control was like a national farce, if it were not so tragic.

Ministerial declarations that there is no difference between Fine Gael and Fianna Fail policy must come as a rude shock to those misguided followers of Fianna Fail, who had been incited to denounce Fine Gael as traitors for the past twenty years. Every elector must see that Fianna Fail had, in fact, swallowed completely the policy which they denounced for many years.

WOMEN'S INTEREST

All the indications point to Irish women taking a keener interest in the coming general election. It was pointed out to an Irish Times reporter that all parties are alive to the value of the women's support, and that, apart from the problems of food and clothes, the women of Dublin are strongly opposed to what they describe as the neglect of their children at schools in the matter of education. They hold that the compulsory Irish programme is retarding the progress of their children.

MORE PRODUCTION

All parties were united on neutrality, said Mr. Liam Cosgrave, one of the Fine Gael candidates for Co. Dublin, speaking at Lusk yesterday. It was, however, he added, the only matter on which there was agreement. The policy on which Fine Gael sought the confidence of the electors was designed to increase production both in agriculture and industry.

North Cork.—Messrs. Timothy Linehan and Patrick Daly, outgoing Deputies, were again selected at a Fine Gael Convention for North Cork constituency in Mallow yesterday.

Censorship Board Resignation

Professor William R. Fearon, F.T.C.D., has resigned from the Censorship of Publications Board.

Succeeding on the Board the late Professor Thrift when he became Provost of Trinity College, Professor Fearon regarded his appointment from the outset as a temporary one, but remained a member in view of illness among other members. In the last year or two, however, his work as a member of the Dietetic Council of the Irish Medical Association has become so heavy that he felt he could no longer continue on the Censorship Board.

"I feel overworked," Professor Fearon told the Irish Times yesterday, "and I have been endeavouring to meet the more urgent demands of my work."

Dublin Potato Scarcity

Mr. Sean Lemass, Minister for Supplies, yesterday received a telegram from the Dublin Corporation Labour Group asking him to improve Dublin's supply of potatoes.

Many Dublin families have had to go without supplies, and others could obtain only a quarter of a stone if they were lucky to be customers. Complaints regarding the quality of the potatoes are also general. The telegram sent to the Minister stated:

"Dublin Corporation Labour Group gravely concerned about the shortage of supplies of potatoes in the city, and request your immediate intervention, with a view to securing the more equitable distribution of available supplies at a reasonable price to the consumer."

New German Ambassadors Appointed

New German ambassadors have been appointed to the Vatican and Spain, Berlin announced on Saturday night. Freiherr von Weizsaecker, the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs has been appointed Ambassador to the Vatican, and Herr Hans Dieckhoff, the last German Ambassador to Washington, to Madrid. Dr. Ernst Woermann has been appointed German Ambassador to Nanking. The present Ambassador to the Vatican, Herr von Bergen, has retired. Dr. Adolf von Steengracht has been appointed Under-Secretary for foreign affairs.—(Reuter.)

Rail Engineers May Strike

The strike notice of 300 members of three engineering unions, employed at the Broadstone and Inchicore, expires to-night. On last Monday night the men decided to defer strike notice for a week at the request of the Minister for Industry and Commerce. A further conference held last Saturday at the Department of Industry and Commerce failed to find a solution of the dispute, which is concerned with a wages demand.

Focke-Wulf And Skoda Works Heavily Bombed

BRITAIN'S heaviest night offensive of the year was launched on Friday night, when more than 600 bombers attacked the Skoda arms works at Pilsen and the armaments centre at Mannheim-Ludwigshafen.

It was followed in daylight on Saturday by a big United States bombing raid on the Focke-Wulf factory at Bremen.

Fifty-five bombers were lost in Friday night's raid and sixteen in that of Saturday. It is claimed that more than fifty German fighters were destroyed.

More than 50 German fighters were destroyed by United States heavy bombers when a strong force attacked the Focke-Wulf factory at Bremen in daylight on Saturday, said the Press Association.

The bomber crews estimated that upwards of 150 German fighters made sustained attacks; a number more were "probables" or damaged. The Americans lost 16 bombers, the heaviest Eighth Air Force loss to date in a single operation.

United States Air Force, Royal Air Force, Dominion and Allied fighters made diversionary sweeps during the attack, which was carried out in face of fierce anti-aircraft.

Meanwhile, the Royal Air Force on Saturday continued their raids and sweeps. Venturas, escorted by fighters, bombed the railway yards at Abbeville and the railway centre at Caen, and a third force, attended by United States fighters, attacked an industrial plant at Zeebrugge, scoring bursts on the power station. Five opposing fighters were destroyed during the day, and three Allied fighters are missing, but the pilot of one is safe.

These day attacks completed, up to dark on Saturday, nearly 100 hours of non-stop air blows from the French Atlantic seaboard to the eastern boundaries of the Reich.

600 BOMBERS

They followed Friday night's greatest Royal Air Force night offensive of the year, when more than 600 bombers attacked the 328-acre Skoda Arms Works at Pilsen, in Czecho-Slovakia, and the armaments centre and rail junction of Mannheim-Ludwigshafen, in the Rhineland. Huge explosions, big fires and dense masses of smoke were seen by the bomber crews in each target area and the first reports are that the attacks were concentrated and successful.

Fifty-five bombers were lost in the two raids—37 at Pilsen and 18 at Mannheim—the biggest Royal Air Force loss in any one night. Great loads of bombs were dropped, including 4,000-pounders.

BRITISH COMMUNIQUE

"On Saturday night aircraft of Bomber Command laid mines in enemy waters," said yesterday's British Air communiqué. "Fighter aircraft on intruder operations over France, Holland and North-West Germany attacked enemy transport and industrial targets. Army Co-operation Command aircraft bombed railway power stations between Paris and Le Mans. Three aircraft of Fighter Command are missing."

GERMAN REPORT

The German communiqué said: "A United States bomber formation on Saturday attacked the town of Bremen. Bomb hits in residential quarters caused casualties among the population. Fighter and anti-aircraft defences forced parts of this attacking enemy to turn off before reaching the objective. According to reports so far to hand twenty four-engined bombers were shot down. Two of our fighters were lost in aerial combat. On the high seas and in the coastal areas of the occupied western territories another eleven enemy 'planes were destroyed."—(Reuter.)

SOVIET RAID ON DANZIG

Soviet 'planes appeared almost simultaneously over Danzig, Koenigsberg and Tilsit on Friday night, says a Red Star correspondent. In Danzig the first bombs to go down caused a "tremendous conflagration." A big fire was started at Danzig railway junction, and in two hours of intense bombing 'plane after 'plane appeared over the objectives. At the same time other Soviet long-range bombers were pounding Koenigsberg for the fourth time this month. They caused about 10 heavy explosions and over 20 fires. No Soviet 'planes were lost. Railways were the target at Tilsit—an important junction—which was raided by a large group. Big fires were started at the railway station.—(Reuter.)

MERCHANT VESSEL TORPEDOED

"One medium-sized merchant vessel was torpedoed and other ships were hit when a large enemy convoy was attacked by aircraft of Coastal Command off the Dutch coast yesterday (Sunday) afternoon," states the British Air Ministry News Service.

"Beaufighters, carrying torpedoes, were escorted by Spitfires of Fighter Command and Mustangs of Army Co-operation Command. The convoy consisted of approximately 15 vessels. One, a medium-sized merchant vessel, was hit by two torpedoes and left on fire and listing."

Call for Educational Reforms

The Ulster Teachers' Union, at its annual conference in Belfast on Saturday, passed a resolution calling upon the Government to make immediate preparations for urgent educational reforms, and to plan for the reforms promised after the war.

In his presidential address, Mr. D. McDowell said that any scheme of reform should include compulsory attendance and make provision for training in citizenship, medical and health services, and physical as well as mental culture.

Smart Women Reveal New Beauty Secret

How to keep the skin fresh, petal smooth, and free from shine without constant applications of a powder puff—that's what women everywhere have wanted to know. At last cosmetic science has solved the problem.

Revolutionary New Liquid Foundation that stays matt all day

UNTIL now the average woman's method of finishing her complexion was to apply powder over a cream base. This was satisfactory as far as it went, but—as every woman knows only too well—it doesn't go far enough. It doesn't last, and quickly shows signs of shiny skin unless constantly 'touched-up.'

Every woman, and every cosmetic manufacturer, knew what was really wanted—a powder foundation that kept the skin matt and free from shine all day and under exacting conditions. Now, at last, after long research, it has been produced.

COMPLEXION SHINE BANISHED FOR GOOD

Miner's 'Liquid Make Up Foundation'—evolved in the laboratories of Henry C. Miner, internationally famed cosmetic expert—is proving a tremendous success.

Society leaders everywhere — the women to whom smartness is all-important—are turning to this new foundation for powder, because it fills all their needs. It gives that flawless all-over peach-bloom softness that every woman longs for. Application is quick and easy—just smooth it on. And, most important of all, it keeps its exquisite matt surface from morn till night.

FREE FROM SHINE

That's the beauty of Miner's Liquid Make Up Foundation. It keeps the skin matt even after strenuous hours of work or play.

To look your best not only when you leave your dressingtable, but all day long, follow the lead of the smartest women. Change to Miner's Liquid Make Up Foundation. From chemists everywhere, in 5 skin-matched shades, Naturel, Rachelle, Dark Rachelle, Blonde Tan, Brunette Tan, 8d. and 1/9.

Facts and Figures for Lorry Owners

The following figures show why

THE 'TRIUMPH' RAW TURF GAS PRODUCER IS A BETTER INVESTMENT

A 2-ton Lorry, burning charcoal, costing 7d. per mile, gives 20,000 miles for £583.

The same Lorry, using the recommended 50/50% mixture of anthracite and charcoal, will cost £354.

The same Lorry, on petrol, giving 10 MPG, will cost £300.

The same Lorry, working on a 'TRIUMPH' RAW TURF PRODUCER, using 4lbs. of turf per mile, will give 20,000 miles for £125.

THE FUEL COST IS THE GOVERNING FACTOR

not forgetting the upper-cylinder lubrication given from Turf, with resulting added life to your Engine.

RUSSIA THEN AND NOW

By Our Military Correspondent.

LAST week a correspondent sent in a very interesting letter about the military situation in Russia. The writer of the letter seems to labour under two misapprehensions—if that word is not so strong as to be misleading.

The first misapprehension is that there has been anything really new and surprising in the fight made by the Russians. Nowadays it seems to be completely forgotten that Tsarist Russia was also a great military Power—over a matter of centuries. Sebastopol and Port Arthur were defended in their day with a skill and resolution quite comparable to Stalingrad—though they were remote fortresses instead of pivotal sectors of a general line of battle. "Scorched earth" was applied as resolutely in 1709 and 1812 as in 1941-2. No Russian army of to-day fought more stubbornly than at Zorndorf or Borodino; nor has any attacked more intrepidly than at Ismail, Plevna or Geok Tepe. The Russians, in short, fought well this time because they ran true to form. The changed form of government has had very little to do with the matter.

RUSSIAN VERSION

The correspondent's second misapprehension is that only the Russian version of events in Russia is to be accepted as correct—and also that the Russian version gives a complete account of all the facts. This is quite demonstrably not so. For example, the fact can be checked from neutral sources that as many as three million Russian prisoners are at present in Axis hands. This should be borne in mind when making any comparison between German and Russian losses in the fighting of the last two years. Admittedly, of course, Russia's man-power resources are altogether greater; but, as against this, Russia—now, as in Tsarist times—is waging a war à coups d'hommes. The method can have defects as well as advantages.

OFFENSIVE IN SOUTH

As regards output of war material of various kinds, Russia would certainly seem to be able to maintain relative production as against Germany. There would be a certain disadvantage by reason of the greater distances required to be travelled, but the Russians have made it clear that there is no insuperable obstacle on that score. The situation as regards food is different. It is very improbable that any worth-while percentage of the Don-Ukraine harvest of 1942 got distributed to North Russia; neither can it have been possible to do any winter sowing in the recovered areas around the lower Don. In order to gather the fruits of 1943 spring sowing, it will be necessary for the Russians to pin down the Germans exactly where they are now. Even another Stalingrad would at least cut off the Russian food supply for another year. It is for this reason that another Axis offensive in South Russia is a virtual certainty—and at the earliest possible date.

Some commentators are inclined to question their capacity to launch such a stroke, basing this view on dearth of man-power principally. Unquestionably the man-power question is difficult; but there is no real ground for belief that the recent total mobilisation will fail to solve it. It is also interesting to note that—over and above her existing minor allies—Germany is now negotiating with prominent men like General Kubiliunas in Lithuania and General Dankers in Latvia, in the hope of obtaining some additional divisions, who might, at least, hold defensively appreciable sectors of front. This is more or less what the Finns have been doing for the past year and a half.

Of course, the fact of the Axis deciding to launch a third attack on Russia is not at all a guarantee that this attack would succeed any more than either of the former ones. Russian resistance would certainly be as stubborn and skilful as before. True, recent decrees have resulted in complete militarisation of the Russian railways—for the stated reason that some of the railway personnel were pulling less than their full weight. This followed shortly after Stalin was made a marshal.

The fact that Russia did not at once succumb to the Axis onslaught, but, on the contrary, has hit back hard and effectively, should not be allowed to obscure the fact that Russia has endured striking losses of her most valuable territories. There is a very good, up-to-date detailed map of Russia in Europe (Bartholomew's World Contoured Series, 3s. net), which makes clear enough the actual losses of Russia in means of production and communication. Can Russia dispense with all this for an indefinite period? It counts double on a division, so to speak. One instance would be the ten million tons of coal extracted from the Dombass last year. The amount was, indeed, only a fraction of Russian peacetime production; but it sufficed for the needs of the Axis armies, the railways behind the fronts, and such local industries as could be got into a state of production. There would be other cases of a similar kind.

IRISH RADIO ORCHESTRA

LAST NIGHT'S CONCERT

Most notable feature in last night's symphony concert, broadcast by the Irish Radio Orchestra from the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, was the playing of the Schumann Piano Concerto in A minor, with Moura Lymphany as soloist. The work represents the composer in his most romantic mood, and Constant Lambert, who was guest conductor of the night, had just the temperament and feeling to bring out every varying mood of the composer.

A commendable feature is that the soloist is introduced without any preliminaries, and Moura Lymphany, believing in the motto of a good start, immediately caught and held her audience. Even those who had heard her on the R.D.S. platform must have been agreeably pleased with the maturity of her playing. She has a wonderful range of tonal command, and a delightfully caressing touch that seems to charm all that is best from her instrument. More than any other quality, however, is her sense of feeling—that "soul" for the poetry in the music. Her reading of the opening Allegro showed the artist in its every phase, and one had simply to sit back and enjoy her further elucidation of the fascinating Intermezzo and the sparkling concluding movement. The conductor gave her admirable support with his orchestra, and rounded off a performance that was a real treat. To show her appreciation of the richly-deserved applause that greeted her playing of the Concerto, Miss Lymphany gave as an encore a delicate Chopin Etude full of charm.

The symphony of the night was the Tschaikowsky No. 5 in E minor, a work that is almost an autobiographical reflection of the Russian composer himself. Again Constant Lambert gave an arresting reading of this most popular of Tschaikowsky's symphonies. He brought out impressively in the bass strings the gloom which hung over the author, and most graphically showed the lifting of the depression and the emergence of that gay and happy spirit which animates the succeeding movements. There was some grand playing—each of the movements had something particularly arresting, and the closing Andante Maestoso was worked out to a great climax.

Hamilton Harty's Comedy Overture gave us the composer in characteristic mood, and the Glazounov Stenka Razine, with its theme based on the Song of the Volga Boatmen, was very descriptive programme music.

A most enjoyable concert, which will be repeated in the Mansion House to-night, for those who were unable to get seats last night.

CIVIL DEFENCE PARADE

More than 2,500 men, women and children of the Civil Defence Services paraded through the main thoroughfares of Dublin yesterday.

Starting from St. Stephen's Green, the parade, which was organised by the Local Security Force and included representatives of the A.R.P., L.S.F., St. John Ambulance Brigade and their young cadets, the Auxiliary Fire Services and demolition squads, marched to the music of four bands up O'Connell street while crowds lined the pavements. Traffic was stopped for intervals of fifteen minutes to let the parade pass. At the Parnell Monument they wheeled round and headed for Westland Row Church, where High Mass, presided over by the Most Rev. Dr. McQuaid, Archbishop of Dublin, was celebrated. The Rev. T. O'Neill, C.C., was the celebrant.

An Taoiseach, Mr. de Valera, heads of the Government and the Lord Mayor (Alderman P. S. Doyle) were among those in the church.

Superintendent D. Hurley, Chief Marshal, assisted by Staff Officers J. P. Melville, C. J. Batten and E. D. Browne, were in charge. District Staff Officer A. Clarkin was the organiser.

"WHITE STAG" SHOW

Many of our galleries and their exhibitors could learn a lot about how to mount an exhibition from the exhibition opened last Friday at 6 Lower Baggot street, by five members of the White Stag group—Stephen Gilbert, Kenneth Hall, Pasil Rakoczi, Patrick Scott and Doreen Vanston. Frames, hanging, and spacing are all admirably done. It is difficult to speak as clearly of the pictures themselves, for they are mostly products of that dream vision in which it is very difficult to follow the artists. Some of them seem to be the products of tortured minds, but without that clarity and sharpness which characterise undoubted works of art produced by tortured minds. Stephen Gilbert's single exhibit was the most forceful of the group. Patrick Scott's two pond pictures had an attractive simplicity. One of Doreen Vanston's Achill designs was very soothing in its effect, but Kenneth Hall's abstractions were a little too abstract.

THE Sunday Church Service announcements will appear this week on Thursday. Correspondents are asked to send them as early as possible. Closing hour is 6 p.m Wednesday.

OBITUARY

MR. WILLIAM P. SMITH

The death occurred yesterday at his residence, Church View, Navan, of Mr. William P. Smith, former President of the Irish Auctioneers' and Estate Agents' Association. Proprietor of extensive auctioneering business in Navan, Mr. Smith was well known as a very successful breeder of bloodstock, and figured prominently almost every year in the Doncaster Sales list.

TOUGH CHRISTIANS WANTED

We have plenty of tough men on the screen, but can we not have tough Christians, said the Very Rev. R. J. Devane, S.J., speaking at the second annual conference of the Society of St. John Bosco, held at St. Patrick's Training College, Drumcondra, Dublin, yesterday. Boys, he said, should be taught that telling lies or stealing was cowardice, and quite the opposite of being tough.

Speaking on "Character Formation," Rev. J. M. McAsey, C.S.Sp., said that the unsupervised mixing of the sexes and multiplicity of amusements had increased the perennial problem of adolescence. The purpose of the St. John Bosco Clubs should be to mould the boy into a man of good character.

The whole idea, said the Rev. Father Vivion, O.M.Cap., was to try and get the spirit of St. John Bosco into the lives of the youth with whom the members of the Society came into contact. Masters and leaders of the different clubs should encourage boys to talk; get them to express their views on what they saw in the cinemas; how they reacted; what they talked about at street corners. In this way they would be able to correct abuses.

A B.B. JUBILEE

"My advice to you boys going out into life is to get on, get honour and get honest. Let these three watchwords be your guide and aim," said the Rev. W. H. Smyth, M.A., Company President, 1893, who preached at the Jubilee Thanksgiving Service of the 19th Dublin Company of the Boys' Brigade in George's Hall Methodist Church, Dublin, last night.

"To get on," he explained, "was to do your best in whatever grade of life you are fitted; to get honour is to obey all your superiors and thus gain their admiration, and to get honest is to endeavour to lead your life with God."

The Scripture Reading was read by the company captain, Mr. George B. Griffin. Music was played by the Silver Band of the 14th Dublin Company of the Boys' Brigade, and their leader was Mr. J. S. Reid.

MUSIC RECITAL

Members of the Leinster Society of Organists and Choirmasters were entertained on Saturday night in the Royal Irish Academy of Music to a recital of music by the Ivy Singers, under Mr. Percy W. Williams. The Barton Cup for composition was presented to Mr. Eric de Courcy for his unison anthem for choir, with organ accompaniment. Mr. T. H. Weaving presided.

Four Months for Revolver Theft

Trooper Frederick Taylor, a native of Brownstown, Co. Kildare, was sentenced to four months' imprisonment in the Military Prison, Cork, by District Justice Gleeson at Ennis yesterday for stealing a revolver and ammunition. Taylor pleaded guilty, and said he had stolen the revolver with the object of getting a corporal, whom he did not like, into trouble.

IRISH NEWS IN BRIEF

Bacon Curing Order Amended.—The Government have amended a previous Order concerning the curing of bacon for sale. The amended Order empowers the Pigs and Bacon Commission to authorise the curing by registered pork dealers of such portions of pig carcases as are not readily saleable as fresh pork.

"Random Harvest" at Adelphi.—Ronald Colman and Greer Garson, the great romantic stars of the screen, are brought together for the first time to create the hero and heroine of James Hilton's best-selling novel, "Random Harvest," which, in screen form, comes to the Adelphi next Saturday.

Attaché Case Theft Charge.—Patrick Geraghty, no fixed address, Hugh Kilcullen, Eccles street, and Gerry Kilcullen, Orchard terrace, North Circular road, were returned by District Justice Lennon, in Dublin, for trial on charges in connection with the theft of an attaché case, ration books and groceries, from Miss Emily Thompson Ellis's quay, at Charleville road.

Wanting to Sing Cost him £2.—He had had some drink and wanted to sing as well as the M.C., and he regretted that when the M.C. at the dance refused to allow him sing into the microphone he seized the microphone and damaged it. This statement was made by James Montgomery (23), foundry worker, Moss street, when he was charged in the Dublin District Court on Saturday with having damaged a microphone in the Thomas Ashe Hall, College street, the previous night. Defendant was remanded until May 15th to give him time to pay £2 compensation, Patrick Donegan, the M.C., stating that Montgomery had been very reasonable afterwards.

Balbriggan Library Patrons.—During the quarter ended 31st March last, Balbriggan Library issued 10,755 books to 1,851 borrowers, while the average daily number of visitors to the reading rooms was 120.

Maid Sent to Jail.—Josephine Murphy (22), alias Keville, Lower Leeson street, maid, was sentenced to three months' imprisonment by District Justice Lennon, Dublin, last Saturday, for the larceny of clothing value £14.

Ancient Coins in Limerick Bog.—While engaged turf-cutting at Knocknaboul, midway between Abbeyfeale and Athea, James Cahill, of Ballaugh, and Denis O'Donnell, of Convent street, Abbeyfeale, dug out some hundreds of silver coins of the fifteenth century. There were also some beads found among them.

Irish Army Ex-Service Men.—At a general meeting of the Irish Army Ex-Service Men's Association, at 192 Pearse street, Dublin, yesterday, the question of opening the organisation to ex-members of all branches of the Defence Services, including L.D.F., L.S.F., and Maritime Inscription Corps, was deferred to a future meeting.

Ladies Hairdressers' Association.—Mr. P. Keeley, President, informed a meeting of the Irish Ladies Hairdressers' Association, held in Dublin, that depuations had been appointed to interview officials of the responsible Departments on matters affecting the trade of ladies' hairdessing, and that considerable benefits had resulted. It was reported that all the leading ladies' hairdressers in Dublin and vicinity, and close on forty towns, had joined the association.

Teachers Object to New Scheme

The probability that systematic cramming would take the place of teaching is expressed in a protest by the Kerry teachers against the introduction of a compulsory written examination for sixth standard primary school children, which has been issued. Stating that they regard the idea of the examination as most objectionable, the teachers' statement enumerates the reasons for that opinion. Teaching would under this system, they say, be replaced by a kind of lottery, with teachers trying to pick out likely examination questions and teaching certain subjects better than others. The examination referred to had no educational value and would not ensure employment.

The examination would become a very serious obstacle to the revival of Irish, as it would lead to the study of grammatical problems to the exclusion of oral work. Misunderstandings and unpleasantness between teacher and teacher, and teacher and inspector would be brought about, with loss to the children. It was strange that the compulsory examination was confined to primary schools, the child of tender years being made the victim of a "fad of the office." Cramming for this examination would lead to extensions of the children's school hours, which would not be conducive to better health, particularly considering the condition of some of the schools.

The Kerry teachers hold that the child trained with a solid oral groundwork in the subjects of the primary school curriculum will prove the superior of the child trained specially to pass this examination.

Employment Officers' Grievances

Unhappy relations existing between the staffs of Employment Exchanges and the Government were referred to at the annual meeting on Saturday of the Association of Officers of the Employment Branch, and Mr. J. J. O'Loughlin, outgoing chairman, condemned the existing scheme of arbitration, under which, he said, the Minister for Finance, in effect, acted as arbitrator in a dispute to which he is a party. Commenting on additional responsibilities, he said that they wanted official recognition of their extra duties, and required sufficient staff to cope with increased work. He expressed the hope that legislators here would tackle post-war problems in a more courageous manner than the "plans" which so far had been produced outside the country.

Forgot Easter Monday

Dun Laoghaire ratepayers forgot about the holiday season when they fixed Easter Monday for their next discussion with the Dun Laoghaire Borough Corporation. At the first public meeting last month the Corporation listened to the problems of the man-in-the-street, and it was decided to hold a series of such discussions on the last Monday of each month. Although great interest was aroused on the first occasion, Mr. M. J. O'Rourke (Chairman) told the Irish Times that the meetings were an experiment, and there appeared to be little public demand for this one.

Jail for Black Market Offenders

After a trial lasting six days, James O'Connor, of 4 Earl street, Mullingar, was on Saturday sentenced to three years' penal servitude by the Special Criminal Court at Collins' Barracks, Dublin. He had been found guilty on 35 out of 41 counts charging him with breaches of Emergency Powers regulations dealing with prices and the control of prices.

Michael O'Reilly, of the same address, who was found guilty of 16 out of 18 similar charges, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

Imposing sentence, the President of the Court said: "This case disclosed a conspiracy of an extensive nature, over a lengthy period, to defeat the efforts of the State to control the distribution and prices of essential commodities, and to contravene the orders and regulations necessary to achieve that end. Consequently the Court must take a very serious view of what can only be described as large-scale black market activities, and impose severe penalties on those convicted of them."

An application for a certificate for leave to appeal was refused.

Admiral Horthy Sees Fuehrer

"Herr Hitler and the Regent expressed their firm determination to continue the war against Bolshevism and its Anglo-American Allies unerringly until final victory is won," added the statement which pledged the Hungarian people to "fight side by side with its Allies, united in the Tripartite Pact, until this menace to our peoples has been completely eliminated. It will mobilise all its forces for this end for the liberation of Europe and for the security of the life of the Hungarian nation."—(Reuter.)

Admiral Horthy, the Hungarian Regent, has just visited Herr Hitler at the latter's headquarters.

An official German statement—quoted yesterday by Berlin radio—disclosed that Admiral Horthy arrived for a two days' visit on April 16. He returned to Budapest yesterday.

Herr Hitler, the statement says, discussed with the Regent "questions of the general political situation and the fight against the common enemy."

The German Foreign Minister, Herr von Ribbentrop, participated in the talks, while discussions also took place between Field-Marshal Keitel and the Hungarian Chief of Staff.

Derry Customs Hut Burned

A British Customs station at Molenan, Co. Derry, five miles from Londonderry, was burned out yesterday morning. People in a farmhouse a hundred yards from the hut heard a small explosion, but went back to bed, as everything appeared to be normal at the hut, but fifteen minutes later the hut was seen burning furiously. A wooden structure on a brick foundation, it was soon gutted, and, as no other property was endangered, the Fire Brigade was not called. During the day coal in the cellar was still burning brightly. Flames shooting out along the road burned hedge-tops sixty feet away. It is believed that somebody threw a fire-bomb through a window.

John McCelland, special constable, who lives not far from the hut, said that at 5 o'clock he heard an explosion not much louder than a rifle shot, but saw nothing unusual going on at the hut, and he returned to bed. Fifteen minutes later a neighbour, who had seen signs of the fire, came and told him the hut was on fire.

This is the post through which a fugitive furniture van carrying most of the twenty-one recently escaped internees from Derry Jail "jumped" on its way into Eire.

Assistants Elect Officers

The annual delegate meeting of The Irish National Union of Vintners, Grocers, and Allied Trades Assistants was held at 20 Parnell square, Dublin yesterday evening, when the following officers and committee were elected:—President, W. Breen; vice-president, M. Keogh; general treasurer, M. O'Donnell; trustees, J. Burke, E. Brennan, P. Dillon. Committee:—J. Grant, T. McLoughlin, W. Heron, E. O'Beirne, J. Robinson, P. Gavigan, T. Cox, M. Hassett, G. Gilligan, J. Slattery, J. Birchall, J. Cole, M. Gallaher, M. Byrne and D. Devine.

Irish Film Service Advocated

The establishment of their own cinema and film service for the production of films depicting real Irish life, modern and historic, would give to themselves and to the world a true representation of the country, said Mr. Joseph Hanly, Chief Inspector of Rural Science, Dublin, at the closing of Tipperary Social Week last night. To support their plan, he said, to save the language, to teach history, to establish themselves, even in their own estimation, as a distinct community, a national film producing service, even for the guidance and direction of youth alone, would be an essential feature.

Electrical Engineer.—The following candidate has been admitted to corporate membership of the Institution of Electrical Engineers:—As A.M.I.E.E.: Mr. O. D. McDermott (Dublin).

Fined for Practising Dentistry.—Alphonsus R. Dooby, Mary street, Clonmel, was fined £1 and £6 expenses at the local court for practising dentistry or dental surgery without being registered.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH ACTS, 1878 TO 1931, AND THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT ACTS, 1925 TO 1941. THE FIRE BRIGADES ACT, 1940.

WHEREAS the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Burgesses of Dublin (hereinafter referred to as "the Corporation"), being the Urban Sanitary Authority for the County Borough of Dublin, and acting by their City Manager and Town Clerk, have presented a petition to the Minister for Local Government and Public Health praying for a Provisional Order under these Acts:

AND WHEREAS the proper advertisements have been published, notices served and plans deposited for public inspection:

NOW THEREFORE, the Minister for Local Government and Public Health hereby gives notice:—

1. That the purport of the proposed Order is to empower the Corporation to put in force the powers of the Lands Clauses Acts with respect to the purchase and taking otherwise than by agreement, of the lands and premises set forth in the petition of the said Corporation, the denominations and quantities of which were stated in the said advertisements and described in the said petition, for the purpose of extending the Central Fire Station at Tara street, in the Parish of St. Mark, in the City of Dublin.

2. That he has instructed his Engineering Inspector, T. W. Wren, B.E., to make a local inquiry into the said petition and as to the propriety of assenting to the prayer thereof, and that the said T. W. Wren will attend at the City Hall on Tuesday, 4th May, 1943, at the hour of 11.30 o'clock a.m. to make inquiry accordingly.

3. That all persons interested will be permitted to attend and make objections to the proposed Provisional Order, or any such objections may be forwarded to the Minister for Local Government and Public Health at his offices, the Custom House, Dublin, to be received there on or before Saturday, the 1st of May, 1943.

ARMY MISSIONS CLOSE

Tributes were paid to the regular attendances of the large numbers of officers, N.C.O.s and men by the missioners at the various military centres throughout the country when the annual Lenten missions concluded, with customary military ceremonial, on Saturday and yesterday. The missions had been in progress during the week in all the barracks, and an annual Triduum was given in the smaller posts, camps and stations.

In their concluding addresses the missioners complimented all present in the different barracks on the very large numbers who received Holy Communion, and urged all to continue faithful to their good resolutions. After the renewal of Baptismal vows the missioners imparted the Papal Blessing. Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament followed, and the Royal Salute was sounded by the buglers from the units. Army bands accompanied the Church parades during the week.

The Pacific Theatre

There is a growing belief that the Japanese contemplate a new offensive in the South-Western Pacific within the near future. So far as can be gathered, no positive ground exists for this belief, but during the last fortnight the two Allied commanders in the area, as well as several members of the Australian Government, have appealed for a larger flow of munitions of war, and have deprecated any excess of confidence. Mr. Curtin, the Commonwealth's Prime Minister, corrects a dangerously prevalent point of view. On several occasions in the past year the Allies have gained important victories over the Japanese, and these victories have created an easy belief that, as often as the Japanese threaten a major operation, a smashing blow can be dealt to them. That belief, says Mr. Curtin, is all very well, but "these blows impose a strain on our resources, which at times come perilously close to exhaustion point." The flow of material to the Pacific, he continues—notably the flow of aircraft—"does not measure up to the requirements of a holding war." In a previous speech he said that the reverses to Japan have caused no fundamental change in her war plans; what they have done is to persuade her that future attacks must be on a heavier scale. General MacArthur has taken an equally serious view of the situation. Except for the Allied submarine activities, he has declared, the Japanese have complete control of the sea-lanes in the Western Pacific and of the outer approaches to Australia. Such control no longer depends essentially on naval power, but on aircraft operating from land bases—of which bases the Japanese have abundance. He believes that they must be defeated in the air if Australia is to be secure, and issues an appeal for more aircraft and for sufficient ground forces to conquer and hold whatever territory may be won back by the use of air power. It may be that General MacArthur's insistence on the need of air power has been dictated, in some measure, by a phenomenon of the last ten days. Until lately there has been little news of Japanese activity in the air; most of the bombing raids have been conducted by Allied aircraft upon Japanese objectives; but during the past week the Allied bases in Papua have been attacked with forces that are said to have numbered nearly 300 machines. This is an entirely new development, and nobody can be surprised if the Allied commanders are disturbed by it. It took a long period of severe fighting to recapture Papua and Guadalcanal, and whether they would have been recaptured at all without Allied superiority in the air is doubtful; if that superiority cannot be maintained, the threat to Australia may be renewed.

Illiteracy

"Reading, 'riting, and 'rithmetic" have long been considered as the very elements of an elementary education. The first two alone are the elements of literacy, and the essential instruments of education. According to official statistics, only a small proportion of the people of Great Britain is illiterate—to be exact, three people in every thousand; and, of this section, it would be supposed that the greater part consisted of old people, who had not come under the influence of universal schooling. It seems, however, that this figure is totally misleading. It is calculated on the basis of the number of people who sign the marriage register with a mark. Hence, as The Times Educational Supplement points out, it is taken from a sample of only 1.5 per cent. of the population, and, what is more, it takes no account of "the problem of the adult who can write his name, but whose knowledge of reading and writing is so slight as to be useless for practical purposes." The figures revealed by investigation in the Army tell a very different tale. In a group of Pioneers, 31 in every thousand were illiterate, in the wider sense; in an artillery division—which may be taken as a little above average, as the Pioneers may be considered somewhat below it—20 men were illiterate in every thousand. Still more interesting is a comparison of the ages; for by far the largest number of illiterates comes from the 20-25 age group. Three main reasons are advanced. Firstly, there is poor attendance at school; secondly, a "by-passing" system in schools, which tended to ignore the backward boys completely; thirdly, a general low level of intelligence. On the basis of these Army figures, it is believed that the illiteracy rate for the whole of Great Britain may be ten times the official figure, or three per cent. Great Britain is not alone among civilised nations in having an illiteracy rate far above that officially recognised. It will be recalled that, some time ago, President Roosevelt declared himself seriously concerned at the number of young men who had to be rejected by Army boards on this ground. For Ireland no figures are immediately to hand; but it may be surmised that the record is no more creditable. The Minister for Education has said that the daily school attendance rate for the country is as low as 84 per cent., and, in some areas, 80 per cent. In other words, it might be said that two out of every ten children in the country fail to attend school at all. Most often, absenteeism has the approval of parents. Immediate investigation by the School Attendance officer, as soon as the morning roll has been called, has given good results in the city, but would be virtually impossible in the remoter districts. An investigation of the proportion of illiteracy in this country might show startling results. It would at least show the country the task with which the educational authorities are faced.

The Sirens' Song

Dublin residents who live in the vicinity of air-raid sirens will sympathise with the people of Britain, many of whom are appealing for the adoption of a more musical variety of warning than the familiar "banshee." The effective range of an air-raid siren is unstated. The annoyance range, as illustrated on the occasions of those Saturday morning practices, is very respectable. At least, the strident notes are effective in rooting out many a slug-a-bed who can silence the alarm-clock with the ease of a practised sniper. It is questionable, however, whether any of the proposed substitutes would find much more favour. A martial trumpet-call would arouse constant enthusiasm only in retired cavalry officers and in Boy Scouts, and some embarrassment would be caused to those who had to choose between the "Charge," the "Retreat," and—from consideration for those possessing internal shelter-rooms—the "Come to the Cookhouse Door." The amplified sound of a thousand bagpipes would be even worse, as suggesting the imminence of another protest meeting by a language group, and tending, therefore, to cause civilian alarm and despondency. The call of the cuckoo has been proposed. Apart from the confusion that might result from the untimely appearance of the genuine owner of the wandering voice, at a moment of tension, such a warning would contribute little to the stability of civilian moral. The charm of the cuckoo is, essentially, in his elusiveness. Tonally, he is a mere traditionalist. On the whole, the present siren could scarcely be bettered; it is loud and distinctive, even though unmelodious. It must be regarded as a satisfactory, if not a pre-eminent, design. That unfailing source of entertainment, the "Miscellany" column of the Manchester Guardian, mentions that one of the siren-kings, a certain Professor Holmes, "when asked to make a siren with a 'distinctive note,' produced one at the Paris Exhibition of 1867 with such a 'diabolical ear-splitting noise' that it was immediately forbidden." That is the triumph and the perfection of siren-science. Perhaps we are better off with our own aurea—or, at least, aerea—mediocritas.

CRUISKEEN LAWN

By Myles na gCopaleen.

WHILE it is possible for our judges, by mere dint of swotting, to familiarise themselves with positive (or statute) law, there is ample evidence every day even in attenuated newspaper reports, that our jurists are weak in what is called case law. They know little or nothing about the grandiose dicta of decent Irishmen like Palles C.B., Bray J. or Madden J.

In the old days when it was a question of finding what was the meaning of the Malicious Damage Act of 1861, we old circuit men found ourselves in a very tortuous maze of juridical obscurantism. Take section 17. "Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any stack of corn, grain, pulse, tares, hay, straw, baulm, stubble, or of any cultivated vegetable produce, or of furze, gorse, heath, fern, turf, peat, coals, charcoal, wood or bark, or any steer of wood or bark . . . . shall be liable . . . . to be kept in penal servitude for life . . . ." Now in Rex v. Woodward it was a question of setting fire to a stack of barley, produce not covered expliciter in the section. In the case quoted, the offence was held indictable within the section, the court taking judicial notice that "barley is corn or grain, and that beans are pulse." Moreover, "a stack of the flax-plant with the seed or grain in it, is a stack of grain" (Reg. v. McKeever, I.R. 5 C.L. 86; 5 I.L.T.R. 41. On the other hand "rushes and sedge are not straw within 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 89; Reg. v. Baldock, 2 Cox C.C. 55)." Furthermore, "a quantity of straw if packed or erected on a vehicle which is capable of being moved is not a stack of straw": (Reg. v. Price, I C. & P. 729.) Also, a hay-cock has been held not to be a stack of hay, per Fitzgerald, J.

Under Section 15, which deals with malicious damage to agricultural machinery, an attempt was made to obtain compensation for damage to a plough. Held by Johnson J. that a plough is not a "machine" or "engine" within the meaning of the statute, a contrary decision in H.M. courts notwithstanding. Incidentally, I notice it stated in the text-books, in relation to the Shops Acts, 1912, that "the waiters who attend upon the resident guests in an hotel are not shop assistants within the Act" (Gordon Hotels v. London C.C.). I concur. They're just waiters.

Twinfeet, J., of course, has made many strange pronouncements in the Court of Voluntary Jurisdiction. In an action brought under the Marine Hereditaments (Compensation) Act, 1901, a man who lived in an old boat located on a hill sought damages from another man who had been (as alleged) negligent in the management of a dinghy on a trolly (which he was bringing to the railway station) so as to cause the dinghy to collide with the old house-boat. The defence was that the latter structure, being rated to the poor rate, could not be a boat, vessel or ship and that the dinghy, being a land-borne wheeled article, was not a dinghy but a velocipede. Twinfeet, J. inquired whether it was suggested that a small paddle-steamer was a farm-cart but the defence submitted that inasmuch as a paddle-steamer could not be hauled by a horse, mule, pony, jennet, donkey or ass, it could not be a farm-cart within the meaning of the Farm-carts Act and must in fact be a paddle-steamer. The plaintiffs contended that they were the aggrieved parties in a naval collision and entitled to recover damages and compensation from the defendants, who had been negligent in the management of sea-going craft, which was their property and under their care and management. The defendants pleaded alternatively that the 'house-boat' was 'wreckage' within the meaning of the Wreckage Act.

Twinfeet, J., in the course of a long judgment, said that he could find nothing in the Act or indeed in any statute regulating matters of admiralty which made water an essential element in a collision between boats; he was satisfied that the owners of the dinghy had been negligent in the navigation of the dinghy "Marcella" at the junction of Market Street and Dawson Hill. He assessed damages at £4 and excused the jury from service for a year on the ground that they had been at sea for four days.

FILM NOTES

BY OUR CINEMA CORRESPONDENT.

Springtime in the Rockies (Savoy). Here is a film that will undoubtedly have a most successful run. Most of the ingredients that contributed to the success of "Down Argentine Way" and "Week-end in Havana" are faithfully reproduced, and the screen-play is as good as they come. The story, built round the tiffs and reunions of two musical comedy stars, is too slight to be worth expounding. There is plenty of graceful dancing by Betty Grable and Cesar Romero, and the musical side is looked after by Harry James and his orchestra. The cheerful little number, "Run Little Raindrop," will probably catch on and be plugged to death in the next few weeks. The main centre of attraction, however, is our old friend, the Brazilian Bombshell, Carmen Miranda, who is still singing her unintelligible Portuguese songs with a wealth of eye-rolling and hip-swivelling which is, I should hope, inimitable. Her precise meaning may not always be quite clear, but the general trend of her implications is unmistakable. The more orthodox comedy is looked after by Edward Everett Horton (as a bar-tending Bachelor of Arts) and Charlotte Greenwood (who describes herself as "not the midrip type"). John Payne in the male lead gets little to do, but does it well. The colour photography is pleasing, if a little synthetic.

Honourable mention must be made of the supporting Disney cartoon, which is the funniest I have seen for months.

The Last of the Mohicans (Carlton) is a welcome reissue of the Fenimore Cooper film for boys and girls of all ages. Featuring Randolph Scott, Binnie Barnes and Henry Wilcoxon, it is a magnificent affair of slinking Redskins versus the familiar glamourised predatory whites. Photography is as good as one remembered, and the director's handling of crowd scenes a delight to watch. See and enjoy it again. Included in the supporting programme is a variety short, snappy as popcorn, and — in several particulars—just as appetising.

Stolen Life (Capitol)—It was interesting to revisit this Bergner film of a few years ago, but the years which have passed only serve to make Paul Czinner's direction seem inexplicably slow, and the more realistic screen-plays to which we have become accustomed make much of the dialogue sound rather stilted. Adapted by Margaret Kennedy from K. J. Bene's novel, this story of a girl who assumes the identity of her drowned sister will stretch your credulity almost to breaking point, and not all Elizabeth Bergner's art nor Michael Redgrave's sensitive, unaffected performance can give the piece much life.

Sing Your Worries Away (Royal) is a quick-moving, if unoriginal, production whose main purpose seems to be to keep the audience dazed until the stage show comes round again. There is a good deal of "music" by Alvino Rey and his Orchestra, and some traditional comedy by Bert Lahr and Patsy Kelly. When it is all over, you will probably find that the sum impression left on your mind is just exactly nil.

LONDON LETTER

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
SUNDAY NIGHT.

THE use of cork has been prohibited for several months, except under licence, in an extensive range of sports, stationery, footwear, furnishing and household articles for purposes other than direct fulfilment of Government contracts. Spain and Portugal are Britain's only sources of supply of this important commodity, which is used extensively for insulating ships and cold stores, gaskets, etc.; floats, bottle stoppers, crown corks and linoleum, and for various engineering purposes. There are considerable restrictions on the use of cork in the manufacture of such articles as linoleum.

New Conductor

Mr. John Barbirolli, who succeeded Toscanini as conductor and musical director of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra in 1937, has been appointed permanent conductor of the Hallé Orchestra, Manchester, and will take up his duties at the beginning of July. A forty-four-year-old Londoner of Italian and French parentage, Barbirolli made his first public appearance as a violoncello soloist at the Queen's Hall in 1911, and later toured these islands and Europe as a member of the International String Quartette. He founded and conducted the Barbirolli Chamber Orchestra in 1925, and was later musical director and conductor of the Covent Garden Opera for several seasons.

A Fine March

The month of March this year was one of the best that the present generation of farmers have known. It provided almost ideal conditions for ploughing and cultivating land and laying down the cereal crops. At the end of the month Spring work was very far forward, and grass and wheat fields had that green appearance associated more with the end of April. While wheat fields generally look well, there are a number which look poorly. In some cases the presence of crows and numerous upturned turfs point to the fields being affected with wire worms. In others the crop was probably sown too late.

Easter Accommodation

Hotels are not allowed to reserve more than a quarter of their rooms for people wishing to stay more than four nights a week, and pre-Easter bookings have been so great that to secure a room now in London or the provinces is next to impossible. Many people who travelled to holiday resorts on the chance of getting accommodation "on the spot" have been disappointed, and not a few have spent the night on railway station platforms or in police stations.

Co-Operation in Ireland

At the British Association's two-day conference on co-operative systems in European agriculture, which concluded at Chatham House last night, Miss Margaret Digby, of the Horace Plunkett Foundation, has been telling the delegates how the influence of the Irish co-operative movement was out of all proportion to its material achievements. Miss Digby outlined the work of the movement from the time Sir Horace returned from his "cowboy days" in the west of Wyoming and the starting of the pioneer creamery — in County Limerick—in 1888. Throughout his career the Irish co-operative movement stood clear of politics and religion, a detachment on which its founder laid great stress, said Miss Digby. The movement, now approaching its jubilee, has seen a complete change in land tenure, the economic effects of two world wars, the military effects of civil war and revolution, the change to national government, the severance of the six Northern counties, and the consequent division of co-operative organisation and leadership, the institution of a policy of agricultural and industrial autocracy.

World-Wide Influence

The influence of Plunkett's thought and the example of Irish co-operation has spread far beyond its original home, Miss Digby went on. In the United States Plunkett exercised a great and permanent influence in agricultural affairs. Ireland was one of the first countries visited by President Roosevelt's Co-Operative Commission of 1937, and it is not fanciful to see the thought of Plunkett and A.E. reflected in the writings of Vice-President Wallace, to give only one distinguished example. The South African co-operative movement was planted in the first instance by a missionary directly despatched from Ireland. In India Plunkett's name stands for much, and when Professor Adams, one of the trustees of the Foundation, visited China in 1931, he found that a knowledge of Plunkett's ideas had preceded him and that there was a keen desire to hear more of his work.

AN IRISHMAN'S DIARY

Little Gidding

Readers of Mr. T. S. Eliot's latest poem, "Little Gidding" may be interested to know of the connection between this once-famous book-binding community and Limerick.

William Ferrar, the grandson of Nicholas, the original founder of Little Gidding, being apparently of not so peaceful a disposition as his grandfather, became a captain in the army, served in Ireland in the Williamite wars, and settled in Limerick after the siege. His son adopted the family trade of book-binding, which he practised in Limerick for 25 years.

His grandson, John Ferrar, who started the Limerick Chronicle, the oldest existing newspaper in the state, was author of "A History of Limerick," "A View of Dublin Ancient and Modern," and "A Tour to London." He was also editor of a Limerick Directory, the first provincial directory to appear in Ireland.

John O'Keeffe, the actor and dramatist, has left us a description of Ferrar in about the year 1780:—"I knew Mr. Ferrar of Limerick, a printer, bookseller and author; he wrote an excellent history of Limerick, which, a few years ago, I heard read with pleasure. His little shop was at the corner of Quay Lane.

"Ferrar was very deaf, yet had a cheerful, animated countenance; thin, and of the middle size."

Winter Sports

Tobogganing is a sport by no means means confined to those of the privileged classes who used to spend their holidays careering down the Cresta Run.

The other evening, in Little Ship street, I saw a dozen Dublin children getting the same thrills. A flight of stone steps, about twelve in number, leads down to the street; and down this the youngsters were flying on a six-foot piece of corrugated iron.

The noise was terrible. It sounded as if a tank was going through a hardware shop. The children climbed on to their sled, three at a time, at the top of the steps; then they pushed off, and landed with a frightful crash at the bottom. Judging by their laughter and cheers, the excitement of the slide was well worth the jar of the pancake landing.

State Theatre.

The first State-controlled theatre will be opened in England next month. The Theatre Royal, Bristol, has been leased by the Council for the Encouragement of Music and the Arts, and entertainment there from May 11th will be sponsored by the Council.

Apparently, seasons of plays will be presented by companies such as the Old Vic and the Cambridge Repertory, so that the Council will not be in direct control of the productions. There is still, I think, a prejudice in England against the running of an actual company, in the ordinary public theatre, by the State.

Of course, it is argued always that State support means State control, and that State control means unfree, and, therefore, unsatisfactory, art. That point was raised when the question of a Government grant for the Abbey Theatre was first mooted—I do not know how far it has been justified. Soviet Russia, at any rate, has shown that a theatre under the State can still be vigorous and original.

Oh, Miss Porter!

A friend just returned from England tells the following story:—

A woman railway porter was hailed by an elderly gentleman as he descended from the train. She collected his large assortment of luggage, went off and telephoned for a taxi for him, took out the luggage and piled it aboard, and finally helped him into the car.

The gentleman was just settling back in his seat, without having offered the woman a tip, or even paying back the twopence she had spent on the 'phone call, when she waved to the taxi-driver to stop. The old gentleman leaned out.

"What's the matter?" he cried irritably. "Have you forgotten something?"

"Ay," was the reply. "Ah've forgotten to pay for t'cab."

T.C.D. NOTES

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

TO-DAY Examinations for Scholarships begin, and the Supplemental B.A. Degree Examination and Senior Sophister Term Examination take place. On Wednesday next there is the Junior Sophister Term Examination. An exciting event last week was the posting-up of the Little Go results. Athletic activity is by now under way, the track has been opened in College Park, and members of the Harriers are already in training. This week cricket will start in the Park.

On Tuesday, 27th of this month, the wedding will take place at St. Ann's Church between Rev. J. A. MacDonagh and Miss Barbara Sullivan, daughter of the Ven. Archdeacon E. G. Sullivan. Mr. MacDonagh is a brilliant graduate of the College, where he was well-known in hockey circles, being one of Trinity's foremost hockey players.

From April 19th to 22nd—Monday to Thursday before Easter — Holy Communion will take place in the College Chapel at 8 a.m. During this period there will be special "Lunch-hour Services" at 1 to 1.30 p.m., conducted by the Rev. G. Simms. On April 23rd—Good Friday—at 8 a.m. there is Litany and Ante-Communion. At 10 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon will be conducted by Dr. Oulton, and from 2 to 3 p.m. there will be held a One Hour Service.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY

An interesting recent publication was the Annual Report of the D.U. Historical Society for the year 1942-'43. It reveals the fact that the Society, founded on 21st April, 1747, by Edmund Burke, is the oldest debating society composed of students of Dublin University of which any account remains. Twice since its foundation the Society has had to retire from College, yet, on both occasions, meetings continued to be held outside. The appendix, with List of Officers and List of Medallists, dating in each case from the foundation of the Society, shows how many persons prominent in its ranks in their day later achieved distinction in various walks of life, in most cases as eminent clerics, lawyers, scholars or politicians. In the year 1785-'86, Theobald Wolfe Tone, leader of the United Irishmen, was Auditor of the Society. In the year 1838-'39, Joseph Sheridan Le Fanu, the novelist and poet, was President of the Society, while Thomas Davis, the great national poet, acted as Auditor. In 1876-'77, E. H. Carson, afterwards Lord Carson, was Librarian. Thomas Moore, the poet, won a Composition Medal in 1797, and in 1812 Charles Wolfe, author of "Lines on the Burial of Sir John Moore," won a Medal for Oratory. In 1884 Douglas Hyde, President of Ireland, won the Society's Gold Medal in History.

GAETANO DE GENNARO'S ART

The work of Gaetano de Gennaro, whose exhibition opened at the Shelbourne Hotel, Dublin, on Saturday, is of interest, first of all, because of his unusual skill in the medium of pastel. About two-thirds of the 114 exhibits are in this medium, in which he achieves effects of colour and light that most of us thought were only possible in oils. There is probably no one in Dublin who can approach as near to technical perfection in this medium as he does. Mr de Gennaro is also notable for the feeling he has for the surfaces of things, and his skill in depicting them; the sheen of silk, the warm tones of dark velvets, the lustre of wine, the tints of a girl's complexion. Something more than this quality appears in such portraits as those of Sean Keating, Sean O'Sullivan and John Chichester, which have vitality and character as well as perfection of finish. But too many of the portraits, especially those of young women, have little to them except a superficial prettiness, wedded, of course, to a mastery of the medium in which they are executed. There are notable exceptions to this, of course, especially his studies of Miss Dolan, Mrs. E. A. McGuire and Mrs. and Miss Dutt. A severe weeding out of some of the other portraits might, of course, have disappointed some of the subjects, but it would leave one with a much higher opinion of Mr. de Gennaro's talent.

IRISH DISTRESSED LADIES' FUND

A meeting of the Executive Committee of The Irish Distressed Ladies' Fund was held at 6 Merrion square, Dublin, on Friday last, Lady Moore presiding. There were also present:—Lady Eva Forbes, Mrs. W. Ryan, Miss Kenny, Mr. Cyril H. Dickinson, Major Guillamore O'Grady, and Mr. N. F. Coombes (Secretary). Apologies for non-attendance were received from Lady de Freyne and Mrs. G. Stewart. The pension list for May was submitted and cheques amounting to £66 12s. were ordered to be issued. Grants were made from the funds administered by The Irish Distressed Ladies' Fund, the total sum to assist necessitous cases during the remainder of April and on 1st May, amounting to £174 0s. 4d.

STRONG SILENT MAN

—or just denture trouble?

To suffer in silence is often the lot of the man whose false teeth do not fit absolutely perfectly. A denture which, through gum shrinkage, has become slightly loose, allows food to lodge between palate and dental plate, causing pain and discomfort. To restore correct fitting and to prevent embarrassing situations try using KOLYNOS DENTURE FIXATIVE. This preparation should be sprinkled evenly but sparingly on the contact surface of the plate after cleaning.

SO YOUNG TO LOOK SO OLD!

She looks 10 years older than she is, because she's not taking care of her hair. For nothing plays more havoc with a woman's appearance than faded, dull-looking, greying hair. Yet it's so easy to keep the hair looking youthful. Just the daily use of Mutesco—the monastery hair tonic. Used regularly, it promotes vigorous growth, eradicates dandruff, restores grey hair naturally—in short, keeps your hair from marking your age. From chemists, 1/9 and 3/3.

Drumcondra Win The Cup

DRUMCONDRA... 2 CORK UNITED 1

AFTER a hectic ninety minutes at Dalymount Park yesterday, Drumcondra, in the final for the F.A.I. Cup, beat the League of Ireland champions, Cork United, by 2-1, and for the second time in the annals of the club the Cup goes to Tolka Park, the other win having been achieved sixteen years ago.

The game was full of excitement, and the 30,549 onlookers (receipts £1,945) witnessed a really great finish. With only one minute remaining, Cork, battling heroically against a one goal deficit, and having launched a series of heavy attacks, had the chance of the match when, after an exciting exchange in the Drumcondra goal, the ball came out to Madden. The United's inside left let fly hard and straight, but he got his foot just the merest trifle too much under the ball, and over it went, a foot or so too high, a golden opportunity thus being lost. But no blame could be attributed to Madden.

Before that thrilling moment the Drumcondra defence had stood up to many heavy onslaughts, and twice Flynn greatly distinguished himself by brilliant saving, one clearance from O'Reilly, which he turned over the bar, being positively brilliant, for the ball was driven at him from close range.

Victory went to the better team. It was a typical cup final, with not a lot of first-class play from either side, but the good football was served up by Drumcondra, whose full-backs and half-backs excelled anything they yet have accomplished in defence and attack. The five played their part magnificently, but it would not be unfair to the others to record the opinion that the two outstanding in the lines of defence were the wing halves, Mulville and O'Mara, whose footwork, placing of the ball, and coolness under severe pressure considerably helped their team to another really remarkable triumph.

Flynn, and the full-backs, O'Rourke and Clarke, also gave polished displays; and, even though there was, however, pronounced lack of finish forward, particularly in the first half, when, with the conditions favouring, they should have added a couple more, the line revealed a dash and determination that extended to the full the United's defence. The wing men, Ward and McGrane, showed surprising speed, particularly the ex-Bohemian on the left; and even if Daly was not always up to assist his wing, he, McNamara and Dyer did much effective work, especially in the second half, when the champions went all out to save their great reputation.

This, however, was not the cool, methodical, well-skilled Cork team that for three seasons running won the championship. They completely altered their tactics, and there were periods after the interval when they threatened to overwhelm the opposition, but O'Mara, Mulville and McGlynn were heavy spanners in the wheels, and it was but rarely that we saw a typical United attack developed.

The Southerners' defence, however, was excellent, and if, for once in a while, Duffy outshone Hayes, until he realised the seriousness of the position nearing the end, the right full had another good match. The half-backs, however, were just ordinary, but Curtin looked after McNamara well. McCarthy, the centre forward, was the weak spot in the line; he never was a source of worry to McGlynn, but it could with truth be written of the whole line that they played much below their best, or, perhaps, as well as they were allowed to.

With the wind behind them, Drumcondra enjoyed a decided superiority in the first half. Their play all round was much better, and they were by no means flattered when they crossed over leading 1-0, the goal being scored by McGrane after eleven minutes with a hard, unerring drive that always was a winner. The general opinion then was that the Tolka Park men had not done quite enough, but in one of the few bouts of attacking they had in the first eighteen minutes of the second half they went further ahead through McNamara, who whipped up a pass from Ward at close range.

Eight minutes later O'Reilly reduced the lead, taking the ball as it came off the post from McCarthy's shot. Then ensured a tremendous tussle between the United forwards and halves and the Drums' defence, and a draw seemed certain; but Drumcondra continued to play the cleverer football, and the goalkeeper and backs did the rest.

RUGBY CUP RETAINED

BY OUR RUGBY FOOTBALL CORRESPONDENT.

OLD BELVEDERE 7 U.C.D....... 3

THE final of the Leinster Senior Cup atoned for a lot of the disappointment experienced by the poor play in the earlier rounds; for the game at Lansdowne road on Saturday, in which Old Belvedere beat University College by a dropped goal and a try to a penalty goal, provided a certain amount of bright Rugby, and a great deal of excitement. This is Old Belvedere's fourth Senior Cup in succession, but, in a tremendous fighting finish, the University nearly succeeded in depriving them of the trophy.

A minute from the end K. O'Flanagan actually crossed the line, but he was hurled into touch before he was able to ground the ball, after a magnificent burst of speed and determination. If he had scored the kick would have been very difficult, but it might have snatched a last moment victory.

Even though the Quinn combination was broken up—Kevin was unable to turn out and D. O'Connor took his place in the centre—Old Belvedere were just the better side. Their forwards were bustled at times, but stuck to the job in grand style, and their packing in the tight was as compact as ever, with the result that S. Henry was able to get possession from almost every scrum. That was a vital factor in the result, and another was Frank Quinn's excellence at out-half.

As a general rule, he is the least prominent of the brothers in attack, especially at the present time, contenting himself usually with forming a link between the scrum and the three-quarter line, and also kicking with fine judgment. On this occasion he dropped a perfect goal and made the cut-through which was responsible for the only try of the game. Apart from that, his kicking was up to its usual standard, and his handling was almost faultless when mistakes might have been fatal.

The College tackling was very determined, and they were so quick up on the opposition that the Old Belvedere backs could seldom bring off a passing movement to the wing; but, even so, their handling and passing was far better than anything done by the College backs. G. Quinn was damaged on more than one occasion, and was more subdued than usual, but both he and O'Connor defended well, and McNelis watched O'Flanagan closely.

The weakness on the College team lay in the centre, where neither Flanagan nor Hingerty could handle consistently, with the result that the wings got few chances. Lyons never showed confidence, but with more opportunities O'Flanagan might have been a match-winner. A feature of the game was the play of the full-backs, both Thorp and McEntee bringing off grand clearances under difficulties.

The forward struggle was extremely keen, and, while the College pack had slightly the better of the loose rushes, that was offset by Old Belvedere's superiority in the tight. Kennedy and O'Dwyer for the winners and Spelman and Holohan for the College were always on the ball, and Holohan made one remarkable run in the second half.

Old Belvedere had the breeze in the first half, but their only score was Frank Quinn's dropped goal after twenty minutes' play. After the interval Old Belvedere attacked very hard, and from a scrum outside the 25 Frank Quinn cut through, and accelerating at the right moment, went right up to McEntee before sending over Gerry Quinn. Not long afterwards O'Flanagan kicked a penalty goal for the College.

REST OF LEINSTER

The following will represent Rest of Leinster against the cup-holders, Old Belvedere, at Lansdowne road next Saturday (3.15):—

A. A. Norton (St. Mary's); K. P. O'Flanagan (U.C.D.), P. Meehan (St. Mary's), S. Walsh (Dublin University), N. B. Taylor (Wanderers); E. A. Carry (Old Wesley), S. de Lacy (Dublin University); S. Barnes (Dublin University), P. O'Donoghue (U.C.D.), M. Ahearn (Monkstown), K. O'Brien (Bective Rangers), S. Milroy (Clontarf), J. Guiney (Bective Rangers), B. Holohan (U.C.D.), T. Halpenny (U.C.D.).

Players unable to turn out should notify Mr. E. Taylor, Sec., Leinster Branch, I.R.F.U., immediately.

MUNSTER CUP FINAL

At Limerick on Saturday in the final of the Munster Senior Cup Cork Constitution beat Army (Southern Command) by 2 goals, 1 penalty goal and 3 tries (22 points) to nil. Moroney, Irwin, Riordan (2) and O'Driscoll scored tries for Constitution. Barry converted twice and kicked the penalty goal.

TRIBUTE TO MR. JOHN MACAULAY

At Lansdowne road on Saturday past and present members of the Committee of the Irish Rugby Union made a presentation to Mr. John Macaulay in recognition of his services to the Union for over fifty years. Mr. John Warren (President of the Union) presided, and the presentation, which consisted of a handsome silver salver, autographed by the members, was made, in the unavoidable absence of Sir Frederick Moore, by Mr. John O'Conor, who represented his country on 17 occasions between 1889-1896, and was President of the Union in 1911-12.

Mr. O'Conor paid a tribute to the great work done by Mr. Macaulay for Rugby as player and legislator, and, in particular, to his work on behalf of the Munster Branch, of which he was a past president and hon. treasurer for life. Mr. Macaulay had represented Ireland on the field on two occasions in 1887, was President of the I.R.F.U. in 1894-95, a member of the Selection Committee for 31 years, and of the Committee for over 14 years.

25 to 1 Winner at Naas

MISS D. PAGET'S Kilnaglory put up a fine performance when winning the Champion Steeplechase at Naas on Saturday. Conceding weight to all the other runners, he was waited with by D. L. Moore until approaching the last fence, which he jumped alongside Erinox, and readily ran the latter out of it.

Mr. J. W. Osborne, whose training stable is not far from the course, saddled two winners—Barghora, who simply romped away with the Celbridge Hurdle, and Silver Fame, owned, in partnership, by Captain R. L. Mansfield and Mr. Osborne, who got the better of a close finish with the outsider, Miss Chickadee, to win the amateur riders' race. Mr. Joe McGrath had his first score of the season when his two years old Recherche beat Ekyad by a short head in the Kingsfurze Plate. This Umidwar colt's dam died a couple of weeks after foaling, and Recherche had to be bottle-fed.

Foam Crest won the Dublin Hurdle in good style, and incurs no penalty for the Irish Lincolnshire Handicap, in which he seems to hold a good chance of repeating his victory of last year. Obligato lasted out just long enough to win the Fishery Plate, and Black Mask gained a surprise success in the Stewards' Chase, for which he was allowed to start at 25 to 1.

COURSES FOR TRAINED NURSES

The sixth annual post-graduate course for general trained nurses, sponsored by the Irish Nurses' Organisation, and approved by the Minister for Local Government and Public Health, was held this year at the Meath Hospital, Dublin. The nursing sisters and nurses from all parts of Eire who attended included nurses from local authorities' hospitals and nurses in private practice.

Prices Firm, But Markets Lack Interest

THERE were few features of interest on the Dublin Stock Exchange last week, but the general tone remained firm. Home securities attracted a good deal of attention, and renewed support put prices higher in some cases.

The British Budget, which in normal times would have created great interest, was hardly mentioned. The further increase in taxation on beer and tobacco had no adverse effect on these groups, and the popular issues moved up. Guinness Units closed on Friday at 120/-, which equals the highest price touched during 1942. It is felt that the increased duties will not curtail consumption to any marked degree.

The demand for Local Preference shares continues and supplies are getting smaller. In some cases holders have profits they never dared to hope for, but, unfortunately, they are not in a position to turn them into cash owing to the difficulty of obtaining similar issues at reasonable prices. There seems to be little chance of any break in values in the near future.

Home Funds are holding up well, and in some cases are standing higher than British Funds. Holders of 3½ per cent. Fourth National Loan can get around 108½ for their stock, while they can buy 3½ per cent. War Loan for 105½. The dividend on the Fourth Loan is not payable until August 1, whereas the dividend on War Loan is payable on June 1.

The best feature of the Industrial group was the strength of E. and J. Burke Debs. They more than recovered the deduction of the dividend in a sharp rise to 169/-. These Debs. look attractive, and, despite the recent advance, they are still worth attention both as regards income and capital appreciation.

Good class Industrials are in short supply, and intending purchasers must be content with a yield of about 4 per cent. The shares of some companies look high enough owing to the supply problem, but, with the weight of money seeking investment, prices are not likely to fall very far.

Carroll Ord. are available in a small way at 35/-. On the last dividend of 7 per cent. they offer a return of 4 per cent. The company is believed to be in a favourable position as regards stocks.

Cement Ord. are being steadily absorbed at 39/6, at which the yield is just over 4 per cent. Some people are expecting that the dividend will be increased to 10 per cent. this year. The company is well managed, and there is a ready market for its products. The shares are regarded as a first-class holding.

Many of the newer Irish Industrial concerns are doing better since the war began, and are almost free from outside competition. People who invested their savings in these companies during the initial stages of production have been very patient, and in some cases have gone without any return on their money. It is not, therefore, too much to expect that some modification will be made in the Restrictions on Companies Order to allow these companies to pay slightly larger dividends to compensate holders for the loss of dividends in previous years, and to meet the rise in the cost of living.

WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Saturday.—The session was one of the slowest this year. The market was fairly active early on, and, while minor fractional advances were well distributed near the close, declines were plentiful.

Senate action against power to devalue the dollar chilled Gold Mining shares. The closing trend was irregular.

The turnover of 459,000 shares comprized 710 issues, of which 374 advanced, 176 declined and 160 remained unchanged.—(Reuter.)

ULTRAMAR ISSUE

It was rumoured in London over the week-end that the details of the issue on bonus terms to be made by the Ultramar Co. will be one new share for every six shares now held, at 35/- per share.

At Friday's closing price the bonus would be worth about 2/6 per share.

OPPORTUNITIES

The Rev. Canon Parkinson Hill began his series of Holy Week addresses in Christ Church Cathedral yesterday evening. He examined the reason why Jerusalem had not known the day of its visitation, and asked why the pre-war world did not know its days of visitation. There was, he said, always a Nemesis upon those who neglected opportunities. This could be seen in the history of nations as well as in the lives of individuals. Canon Hill will continue his series of addresses to-day, and each day at lunch hour, up to and including Thursday. The Dean will preach at the 11 o'clock Service, and the Rev. A. S. Bluett at Evensong at 3.30 p.m. on Good Friday.

Mgr. Scharnagl, Titulary Bishop of Zenopoli de Isauria, has been appointed by the Pope assistant to Cardinal Faulhaber, Archbishop of Munich, stated a Vatican City message to the Italian News Agency on Saturday.—Reuter.

C.P.R. Record Earnings

BY OUR LONDON CORRESPONDENT.

NO adverse influence upon security values was produced by the British Budget. The news that income tax and surtax had been left unchanged was received with a feeling of relief, but was not followed by an improvement in Gilt-edged stocks, nor was this section helped by the virtual assurance of the Chancellor of the Exchequer that cheap money would be continued after the war.

Tobacco and Brewery issues developed firmness when it was found that the increase in the duties was no greater than had been expected

Record gross earnings were achieved by the Canadian-Pacific Railway for the year 1942, the figure of $256,864,091 exceeding that of 1941 by 35,418,038 dollars., or 16 per cent.

Passenger earnings were at the highest level since 1921, and, while the armed forces contributed a heavy movement, civilian travel was also exceptionally large. During the year a number of steps were taken to integrate the company's air activities into one co-ordinated system operated by Canadian-Pacific Air Lines, a wholly-owned subsidiary.

A considerable reduction took place in the funded debt during the year, the total at the end of 1942 amounting to $143,018,242 against $177,581,522 at the end of 1941. The directors feel, however, that this must be reduced still further before Ordinary dividends can be resumed.

The rise in Kaffirs during the last month or so is probably justified, but, on the basis of the last annual dividends, the yields at current prices are not particularly high, and the possibility of an addition to the taxation of the industry should not be left out of account. In any case, purchasers of the shares for investment should set aside out of the annual dividends a sort of sinking fund for the repayment of capital when the mine is worked out.

Last week's improvement in Brewery issues was due to the extent of the Budget increase in the beer duty, and also the belief that such increase will be provided by the consumer to whom, as usual, it will be passed on, and profits of brewery companies are not likely to suffer.

This view may prove to be correct, and the advice of Sir Kingsley Wood to cut down smoking and beer will be practically ignored, but it would be interesting to learn what amount of extra taxation would mark the stage at which the duty failed to achieve its object by bringing about a substantial reduction in consumption.

On the assumption that the market is right in looking for no big drop in profits in the future, Breweries' shares may be considered satisfactory investments, especially those of companies showing a big profit margin after meeting the Ord. dividend. For example, the last annual dividend of Hammonds, of Bradford, was 10 p.c., but the company earned 22½ p.c., and the shares are available at a price yielding nearly 5½ p.c. Matthew Brown Ord. return 5⅛ p.c. from the last dividend of 10 p.c., but the company earned nearly 36 p.c. On Watney Combe Deferred the yield is 4⅝ p.c. from the dividend of 18 p.c., which compared with annual earnings of 35 p.c. For Bullards the respective figures are 17½ p.c. and 35 p.c., and for H. and G. Simonds 18 p.c. and 37½ p.c., the yield in the two last cases being 4¾ p.c. and 4 7/16 p.c., respectively.

Despite the restrictions placed on its business, the Royal Sovereign Pencil Company has succeeded in maintaining its position, and the dividend is again 7 p.c. The company, which was formed in 1919, has a good record. Profits have been steady, and dividends have varied between 5 and 7½ p.c. over a long period.

Fears that the past year would be less profitable were expressed by the chairman at the last annual meeting in October. He pointed out that, under a Board of Trade Order, production had been standardised, and the company's normal branded goods had been prohibited. This Order, loss of labour, and other restrictions were likely to affect turnover.

Royal Hibernian Academy

AN EXCLUSIVE EXHIBITION

THIS year's Exhibition at the Royal Hibernian Academy of Arts is, perhaps, royally exclusive, but it is hardly Hibernian in its comprehensiveness, for such distinguished and successful exponents of contemporary tendencies in art as Mary Swanzy, Grace Henry, Evie Hone, Mainie H. Jellett, Nano Reid, Norah McGuinness, Yvonne Jammet, Francis Kelly, Jack P. Hanlon, Louis le Brocquoy, and Ralph Cusack are entirely unrepresented. So much as a preliminary grouse.

The place of honour is fittingly occupied by Sean O'Sullivan's imposing portrait of "An Taoiseach." But, as has happened before, this is, in the first instance, a Jack B. Yeats year. Pretty well every one of Mr. Yeats's exhibits is a chef d'œuvre, and what will make the distinguished Irish artist's admirers rejoice is that "Two Travellers," his most ambitious picture this year, is one of his greater masterpieces. And yet the subject is nothing more than two figures on a track leading to a mysterious mountain. The whole virtue of this miraculous picture lies in the treatment. In temper it approaches the mood of ruefully exalted tragedy, so nobly achieved and sustained in the artist-author's moving and beautiful play, "La La Noo," which created such a profound impression at the Abbey Theatre last year. At the other end of the scale from "Two Travellers," Mr. Yeats's small "Welcome" is radiant in colour as in mood, and his other pictures, notably the wonderful "The Man in the Moon has Patience," are all authentic poems in paint, beautifully tempered in conception and choice in execution.

The President of the Academy, who, over the week-end was busying himself happily with his varnishing, has to be welcomed back to health and to work after a winter that brought him prolonged illness and great personal bereavement. It is a matter for warm congratulation that his contributions to the exhibition, notably the portrait-study "Magnolias" (interesting more particularly as an experiment in colour-composition), and the landscape, "The Doctor's Oats," show no falling off in his wonted sureness of both approach and execution.

After the portrait of Mr. de Valera, the example of that particular branch of painting most likely to claim attention this year is James Sleator's "The Late Sir William Orpen," which is at once technically impressive and humanly charming. Rather in the nature of an act of homage to his master, it reveals Mr. Sleator with his heart nearer than usual to his sleeve, but it has nevertheless all the cultivated distinction and taste we expect to find in his work. These qualities are also to be noted in the artist's "Lennox Robinson, Esq.," and (unfinished) "Jack B. Yeats, Esq." The half-dozen Leo Whelan portraits, which include studies of the Provost of Trinity College, the President of University College, Dublin, and the late General Michael Collins, have the brilliant finish we expect from this artist. Besides some characteristic seascapes and studies of Irish country types, John Keating sends colourful portraits of "The Late Most Reverend Dr. O'Dwyer, Bishop of Limerick" and "Brighid Ni Lionsigh as Pegeen Mike." Frank McKelvey, too, includes a dignified portrait, that of Lord Justice Babington, with a group of his popular landscape studies. Margaret Clarke's "Ernest Keegan, Esq.," though it has unquestionable distinction, is perhaps less vital than her work sometimes is, but the surpliced "John" is the artist at her happiest. Again, in "Cluny Madonna," by Sean O'Sullivan, we see an artist making a felicitous break-away from the tyranny of portrait-painting. Maurice MacGonigal, too, breaks what is for him new ground with "Crucifixion," an admirable exercise in design, in which the reverent figures at the foot of the Cross wear West of Ireland costume. It is clear that the painter of this picture has given a great deal of thought to the working out of his conception, and the result justifies the hope that he will feel encouraged to develop his ideas humanly and artistically in other versions of the sublime subject.

Landscape

In landscape art, Paul Henry's "Curragh" has notably delicate treatment of the sky, and J. Humbert Craig's "Early Summer, Glendun," considered as colour and atmosphere, is one of the freshest things the artist has sent us in recent years. Charles Lamb's sense of atmospheric perspective is evident in several western scenes. Estella Solomons adds a couple of dimly-lit woodland studies to a group of Kerry scenes that are more brilliantly plein-air in treatment. And Letitia M. Hamilton has a fine array of sensitively-realised, highly-keyed decorative landscapes.

Lady Glenavy's fantastical imaginings, of which the most animated this year is, perhaps, "Spring," seem to have developed a new subtlety of both pattern and colour, though it seems a pity that this brilliant artist should not extend her technical researches to the study of atmosphere and let the light of day sometimes pierce the penumbra in which her pretty marionettes are too often enshrouded. Harry Kernoff's 1943 fantasies also seem to have developed—in the direction of more assured approach and brilliant effect than those of yesteryear. Another fantaisiste seems to be developing in Colin Midleton, who sends a "Magnetic Landscape."

Genre

Among the works by Associate Members of the Academy prominently displayed are an imaginative study called "The Broken Wing," by George Collie; a broadly-handled sea-piece in high key, "The Morning Tide," by Ernest C. Hayes; and a vigorous marine portrait called "Nearing the Pier Head," by Patrick Leonard. William Conor sends a portrait as well as a number of characteristic genre studies. Lilian Davidson's contributions include an animated "Horse Fair," whereas Mrs. Andrew Ganly's only exhibit is a quiet little genre-piece, "A Story," which seems to mark a return to the artist's earlier richness of colour.

From outside R.H.A. circles comes "Garsún is Gabhar," by Somhairle MacCana, which has fine colour as well as beautifully clean handling. There is extraordinary finish in the flower-pieces by Moyra Barry; and Patrick Hennessy's "Exiles" shows the artist's meticulous technique to advantage. Simon Coleman's "Sir James Nelson" has a suggestion of "quality," and Anthony Reford's "Self-Portrait," for all its debt to Modigliani, carries sufficient conviction to make its young author an artist to be watched. A couple of small pictures by R. Kennedy have charm of colour, and there is an excellent landscape study, "The Forgotten Cottage," by Caroline Scally. Then Frida Perrott has an impressionistically-handled "Blossom," in which the accomplishment displayed may be too easily taken for granted. And there is other painted work that claims attention by Cecil ffrench Salkeld, Kitty Wilmer O'Brien, Frank Jameson, Cecil Galbally, Maurice Wilks, Theo J. Gracey, Dorothy Blackham, Geraldine O'Brien, Fergus O'Ryan, Henry Healy, Phœbe L. Kirkwood, Hilda Roberts Marsh, Gerard Dillon, Maurice C. Cogan and Muriel Brandt.

Sculpture

The sculpture this year is dominated by Seumas Murphy's full-length "Virgin of the Twilight" in polished black marble. It suffers somewhat from being placed on the floor without a pedestal, so that the disposition of the draperies cannot be seen to advantage, the easily flowing lines failing to make their full effect. But the head is finely conceived and executed. Albert Power's exhibits include a delicious small "Concertina-Player" as well as two more ambitious and very successful works. Those of Laurence Campbell include a beautiful head of "Sixten Nielson, Esq.," and a tondo relief of the "Madonna," as well as the artist's smaller contributions, is of notable refinement of execution. Jerome Connor has two characteristic studies. There is a "Head of a Girl," by Marshall C. Hutson, alert of mood and sensitive in handling, and a "Girl's Head" of more thoughtful cast by Domhnaill O Murchada. Peter Grant's "Blessed Virgin" has touching simplicity and genuine vitality. And Helen Hooker O'Malley's full-throated "Mrs. Kiernan" is a happy reminder of an absent singer.

The London sculptor, Jacob Epstein, sends a portrait bust of "Philip Sayers" and a head called "Ragamuffin," which, perhaps, more illustrational than sculptural, has a vividness of expression and movement that reminds one of the painted urchins of Murillo.

Watercolours and Drawings

In this section one is grateful for the freshness of Carmel Flynn's Rhododendrons and for several studies of our own soldiers by Gerald Bruen—the latter one of the few artists in the whole exhibition who seems to be aware of the fact that there is such a thing as an emergency. Gaetano de Gennaro has a couple of portraits in pastel which carry on the tradition of those fashionable artists of the earlier part of the century, Philip de Lazlo and Jean Boldini. Lady Dobbin's unfailing accomplishment is shown this year in "Dahlias," and other artists whose work calls for mention are Paul Egestorff, Tom Nisbet, Bea Orpen, Pat Griffith, Raymond Magrath, Basil Rakoczi, George Pennefather, Helen Pennefather, James M. Brennan and C. M. Doran.

S. Henry, captain of Belvedere, making a speech after his team had been presented with the Leinster Senior Rugby Cup.

CHARTERED SURVEYORS

The monthly meeting of the Chartered Surveyors' Institution, Eire Branch, was held at 110 Grafton street, on Thursday last, Mr. F. D. Shortall (chairman) presiding. Nominations for the election of the new executive committee under the revised regulations were received. The application of Mr. A. I. N. Roberts, P.A.S.I., B.A. (Arch.), Cantab., to be transferred to the Fellowship of the Institution, was approved for recommendation to the Council.

FLEET OF MODEL SHIPS FOR DUBLIN

A fleet of several hundred ships is being assembled by the Maritime Institute for display during Maritime Week, which begins on May 18th. It will consist entirely of models, and will include specimens of every type of boat used around the coast of Ireland. From the National Museum it is hoped to obtain some very fine models, including one of an old-style Howth herring boat, Galway and Kinsale hookers, a Rosslare fishing boat, and various types of curraghs used on the West coast. The Institute hopes, also, to have at its disposal a collection of about two hundred models, some of them very rare, owned by the Irish Model Engineering Society, and models from any private collections. There will also be a photographic section, showing types of Irish boats and ships, of fishing operations, the processes of boat and ship building as carried out in Ireland, and old views of Irish ports and maps of port development. The Irish Photographic Society is lending some of its best prints of subjects of maritime interest. The Institute is still anxious to receive models and photographs of outstanding interest for inclusion in the exhibition.

CATHOLIC BOY SCOUTS' PARADE

To commemorate the eighteenth anniversary of the foundation of the Catholic Boy Scouts of Ireland, 1,500 scouts, cubs, knights-errant and sea scouts of the Archdiocese of Dublin marched from St. Stephen's Green to the Pro-Cathedral yesterday. The procession included pipe bands, and Papal, national association and troop flags were carried.

In Marlborough street the salute was taken by the Chief Scout of Ireland, Professor J. B. Wheiehan. At the saluting base also were the Rev. E. R. S. Farrell, C.C., National Scout Chaplain; the Rev. D. P. Gallagher, C.C., Diocesan Scout Chaplain; National Commissioner P. Cassidy, Commissioner T. McHugh, National Secretary, and members of the National Executive and Dublin Diocesan Council.

In the cathedral Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament was given by the Very Rev. Father Boylan, Adm., assisted by Rev. Father Cregan, C.C., and Rev. Father Collier, C.C. Rev. L. Thackaberry, C.C., was master of ceremonies.

The parade was in charge of the Diocesan Scout Commissioner, Mr. W. J. Kinsella, assisted by Commissioners Meaney, Thackaberry, Whelan and Mahedy.

The three British prisoners of war who sought sanctuary in Vatican City were named in a Rome despatch to Berlin on Saturday as Major Vincent Anley, Sergeant William Cook, and Corporal Frederick Nightingale.—Reuter.

Combined Operations

Concerted action is a principle which has been greatly developed in this war by all arms. But it was known in the last war to doctors and nurses who had wounds to tend and who found in sodium hypochlorite the ideal wound-antiseptic.

To-day, the perfected stable brand of electrolytic sodium hypochlorite is known by the name of Milton. And Milton combines within one bottle the exact three processes required for quick, healthy healing.

It kills germs. It is many times stronger as a bactericide than the standard solution of carbolic.

It penetrates the pus and dead matter, which the germs cause and in which they hide, disintegrates them and clears them away.

It encourages healing. The oxygen which Milton liberates in the wound leaves the healthy living tissues fresh and clean and stimulated to grow and mend.

These "combined operations" are now a recognised part of the treatment of war-wounds and burns. How equally effective must Milton be in the quick healing of "domestic" wounds, Cuts, Burns, Grazes, Scratches, Sores, Broken Chilblains.

Keep a bottle of Milton always handy, then. It costs 7½d., 1/3, 1/10½ or 3/- a bottle. Milton Antiseptic is made in Dublin.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE

without Calomel—and you'll jump out of bed in the morning full of vim and vigour. The liver should pour out two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk, and the world looks punk. Laxatives help a little, but a mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pints of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 1/3 and 3/-.

6 reasons why PAK coffee is better and different

1. It is blended from a selection of the finest Coffees obtainable.
2. Pak is free from any trace of chaff, dust or impurity; because the raw Coffee is cleaned by a special suction process before roasting.
3. It is roasted by the most modern indirect heat method which retains the flavour and avoids burnt berries and a bitter taste. You get a clear full flavoured liquor, fragrant, and appetising.
4. Pak Coffee is perfectly granulated by a special high speed mill which produces a coffee that is clear and of good strength.
5. It is roasted, ground and despatched the same day as it is ordered, fresh and fragrant, in dated sealed packets.
6. Your guarantee of a perfect cup of coffee from Pak every time you make it, is the result of our specialisation in the production of fine coffee for over a generation.

Sold by all grocers at 1/4 per half pound sealed packet.

THE BEST FOR LESS AT NEWELLS

I DETERMINED TO REDUCE—

—and did! It was so simple! I ate my usual meals, took no strenuous exercises, did not weaken my body with drastic purgatives—yet day by day I felt myself getting lighter, the fat seemed to slip away. Now I have a lovely, graceful figure—and I never felt better in my life! That, in brief, is what thousands of women who have reduced the 'Marmola' way might well tell you. Four times a day they take a little tablet containing in exactly the right quantity a world-famous corrective for abnormal obesity. A corrective acknowledged to act naturally and to be a most effective reducer.

Today—buy a packet of 'Marmola' and start at once. Soon you will experience the benefits of 'Marmola.' When you have slimmed far enough, stop taking 'Marmola.'

Sold by all chemists at 3/- per box.

Four-Day Fight For Convoy

ONE of the most ferocious battles of the war between aircraft and U-boats was fought for four days recently across hundreds of miles of the Atlantic ocean. British Coastal Command air crews, at its close, claimed 19 attacks. Strong U-boat forces appeared to have been concentrated across the path of two highly-important inward-bound convoys from the United States of America to Britain.

"The attack on the convoy began outside the zone of air protection, and losses were sustained," said the British Air Ministry News Service. "As the ships came within extreme range of Coastal Command's aircraft, however, Liberators, Fortresses, and Sunderlands were launched against the enemy submarines in an all-out offensive. The battle was fiercely fought throughout. The relentless air hunt and attack increased in tempo, and when it was over the Air Officer Commanding-in-Chief of Coastal Command signalled to the squadrons concerned:—". . . . I would like air and ground crews to know that in this action the effect of the enemy's attack on the convoy was immensely reduced from the moment aircraft arrived. There is not the least doubt they saved a large number of ships."

CAPPOQUIN MURDER CHARGE

AFTER forty-eight witnesses had been heard, the State prosecution in the Cappoquin murder case closed yesterday at Fermoy, and William O'Shea (24) and Thomas White (17), both of Ballyhane, Cappoquin, Co. Waterford, were returned for trial on a charge of conspiring to murder and with having murdered Maureen O'Shea, wife of William O'Shea, on March 15.

It is alleged that Mrs. O'Shea was shot from behind while walking with her husband.

At the conclusion of the case O'Shea said, when asked if he wanted to make a statement, "No, except not guilty." A similar remark was made by White.

Bombing Italian Naval Base

"On Sunday night," said yesterday's British air communiqué, "aircraft of the Bomber Command made another heavy and concentrated attack on the naval base of Spezia, in Northern Italy. One bomber is missing.

"Aircraft of the Fighter Command, on intruder patrol, attacked goods trains and locomotives in Northern France and enemy destroyers at Lorient. One fighter is missing from these operations."

Describing Sunday night's intruder patrol by Fighter Command aircraft over occupied territory, the Air Ministry New Service stated that nine goods trains and two destroyers were among the targets attacked by Mosquitoes, Whirlwinds and Beaufighters. The destroyers were seen at Lorient by a Beaufighter, which flew in low over the naval base. The Beaufighter's cannon shells scored hits along the side of one destroyer, and on the deck and superstructure—from which clouds of smoke rose—of the other warship.

"For their raid on Spezia the bombers took off from their bases in England at dusk, and returned just as dawn was breaking," says the Air Ministry News Service. "Two big explosions on the dockyard area were reported. "The red glow of the fires burning on Spezia" was said to be visible when the bombers were well on the way home."

A British Air Ministry communiqué early to-day stated: "Aircraft of Fighter Command attacked transport targets and a power station in Northern France on Monday morning, and Mosquitoes of Bomber Command attacked railway targets in Belgium last Monday evening without loss."—(P.A.)
